

Washington, D. C., Dec. 11.—Klamath Indians having made a clean-up of millions of dollars in their claim against the government, the Indians on the Colwell reservation in Washington wish to present a claim. Back in 1872 President Grant lopped off from treaty lands of these Indians 1,238,144 acres; threw open to settlement, as Washington was still a territory and needing population. Treaties in those days were disregarded; the Black Hills, pledged to be immune from the white men, were thrown open when gold was found in Deadwood and this the Sioux resented and they wiped out General Custer's cavalry on the Little Big Horn in retaliation. Ancestors of the Indians on the Colwell reservation bided their time instead of going on the warpath; now they want the payoff. Nine Indians from Colwell are in the national capital seeking the right to sue the government in the court of claims. They consider the land worth $1.25 and acre; want $1,647,680 in lieu of the land. Piutes of Harney county are also asking money for the lands taken from them by the government and sold to the cattle barons. The Piutes have been struggling for this for several years; managed to gain senate approval and have been held up in the house. So far Klamath Indians are the only ones to ring the bell; second richest tribe in the country. Colwell tribe also wants compensation for fishing rights on the Columbia, destroyed by Grand Coulee dam.

Every member of the house of representatives has been given a printed list of communists with criminal records in the labor unions by Martin Dies, chairman of the committee on un-American activities. The west coast is well represented.

States hit by the anti-Okie decision of the supreme court (refusal to assist refugees from other states) can expect federal legislation. Representative Tolan, who has been heading a committee making a study of migration since last year, is expected to offer a bill which is calculated to bring the states to time. Apparently the plan will be that when states fail to revise their laws with respect to help they will be cut from federal assistance. The Tolan committee is concerned over the post-war depression and wants some protection ready for the hundreds of thousands who will be in destitute condition when that time comes. Until the supreme court made its decision several western states had laws withholding relief from outsiders.

Now being drafted is legislation which will permit the navy to award regional contracts to firms, notwithstanding that lower bids may be received from contractors outside the region. The measure also reduces the bonding requirements of the little fellows. This bill is intended to spread defense work and remove some limitations. The contract distribution division of OPM says that unless some changes in the present law are made there is not much it can do for small business, despite the demand to use the bits-and-pieces system in vogue in England. If, it is urged, congress is anxious to save small business the legislation must be enacted.

Senator Robert LaFollette (he has been ill with an infected leg) has offered an amendment to the fair labor standards act by defining oppressive child labor employed in agriculture away from their homes. The senator proposes to make allowance for the generally accepted practice of having children perform daily chores on their home farm and his amendment declares that this practice is not "oppressive child labor." It is proposed to permit the children's bureau of the department of labor to supervise agricultural employment without interfering with the institution of the family farm. Responsibility for curbing child labor in agriculture is now placed with local school authorities, who are subject to local pressure and prejudice. This led to a situation which LaFollette hopes to cure. The amendment is of more than passing importance to thousands of farm homes in Oregon.

The order has not been made public yet, but SPAB has given an A-10 rating for farm machinery. Farmers and dealers have been calling attention to an apparent shortage of pumps and water system equipment and this is gradually strangling farm efforts for national defense. The priority rating was issued to relieve this situation, applying the order to dairy and truck farms. A rating of A-10 is the first after the so-called defense ratings. It is commerial, the same as that received by REA for copper wire—and REA has been unable to purchase the wire. Lecturers at grant meetings have been advising farmers to have their equipment repaired immediately, at the nearest blacksmith shop, if they are unable to buy necessary parts.

APPRECIATION
To all the faithful workers who made the Eastern Oregon Wheat league conference here a success, I extend my personal thanks and congratulations. You did a good job. Especially do I believe the heads of the various committees should be recognized, each of whom performed in soldierly manner, else everything would not have clicked so perfectly. They are Harold Cohn, banquet; J. O. Turner, housing; B. C. Pinckney, meeting place; Louis Bergevin, registration; Kenneth Blake, housing; Vawter Parker, window display, and F. W. Turner, entertainment. The all-round help of C. D. Conrad was invaluable.

E. HARVEY MILLER,
General Chairman.
