Feed-Wheat Plan Widely Used to Lift Production

Sale of government-stored wheat for feeding purposes at prices materially below what feed wheat can usually be purchased for is having a pronounced effect on the increase in dairy products and other livestock output in Oregon. Reports from western Oregon county agents show that in less than a month since the AAA made wheat available under this plan, 72 carloads had been ordered by producers or feed dealers in six counties west of the Cascades.

Cheaper feed wheat is making possible greater feeding of concentrates to dairy cows in accordance with feeding tests carried out by the Oregon experiment station. These tests showed that wheat could be used in dairy concentrates up to 50 percent without loss of palatability, and up to 75 percent without great difficulty. Hog growers are also making good use of the wheat, as tests by growers and the experiment station as well have shown that wheat is a better feed even than corn, pound for pound.

Largest orders have been placed in Lane county, where the Farmers Union is assisting in the distribution of producer pools for $1 per ton, using producers' own sacks. In Jackson and Josephine counties dealers are cooperating with the farmers in distributing the wheat. In Jackson county the cost to growers who furnish their own sacks is $34 per ton.

In Douglas county growers have pooled orders for carload lots, with each car sent in the name of one grower, who is responsible for its disposal. In Curry county some feed wheat will be used as maintenance feed for sheep, while in Coos the greatest portion of it will go into dairy feed. Wheat is also being recommended for use in place of molasses, no longer available, in putting up grass silage. One hundred pounds of wheat for each ton of grass will serve the purpose.

"This increased wheat feeding to dairy cows will help provide the 11 percent increase in milk production which Oregon has promised in the food-for-victory program," says W. L. Teutsch, assistant director of extension.

Emergency Crop, Feed Loans Available

Farm Credit Administration emergency crop and feed loans are again available to farmers whose cash requirements are small and who are unable to obtain reasonably adequate credit elsewhere.

Loans are made for the purchase of feed for livestock and for seeding feed or cash crops, and for summer-fallow. First liens are required on the livestock or crops to be produced with interest at 4 percent.

A farmer may borrow up to $400 in one calendar year.

The county agent's office is cooperating with the FCA and farmers as in the past by making out applications for loans and further information may be obtained at the office.

NAVY STATION AT LA GRANDE

The U. S. Navy recruiting service announces that all applicants for the U. S. Navy or the U. S. Naval Reserve in this district will be handled by the U. S. Navy recruiting station, room 228, Post Office building, La Grande. Oregon leads the nation in naval enlistments. By enlisting in the state of Oregon you will help maintain this record, said Thomas J. Aubrey, chief quartermaster, in the city today.

Edison's Ideas Go to War

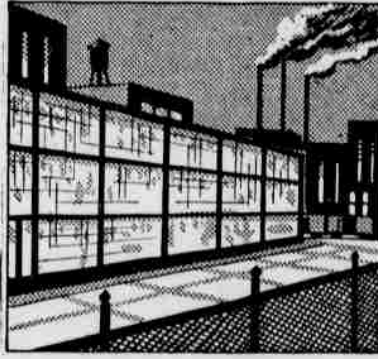

American scientists and inventors, many of them working in the laboratories of American industry, will play a big part in helping to win the war.

1. Thomas A. Edison, born 95 years ago on February 11, was one of America's greatest inventors. In addition to his famous lamp . . .

2. . . he built the first of America's electric power systems, and discovered some of the principles which other scientists used to give us the radio.

3. Today electric light, electric power, and radio—so much improved that Edison wouldn't know them—are performing many vital tasks in America's war effort.

4. And scientists throughout the nation, in laboratories like the G-E Research Laboratory, are working, as Edison once worked, to bring victory.

More 'Warcrops' Sought By New AAA Amendments

Changes in the agricultural conservation program to stimulate increased production of "warcrops" during 1942 have been announced by the state AAA office.

Oregon crops covered by the "warcrop" designation include sugar beets, dry field peas, dry beans, canning peas, canning tomatoes, fiber flax, and flaxseed. The amendments aim at expansion of warcrop acreage and at the same time continuation of soil building practices to maintain soil reserves for 1943 production and for the duration of the war.

The new provisions extend the list of crops and land uses which may be utilized to meet the requirement that 20 percent of the farm's cropland be devoted to soil building crops. Added to the list are grasses and legumes seeded as a nurse crop with flax, peas or small grains.

The state AAA office also pointed out that farmers who underseed wheat acreage in 1942 to grow more war crops will not lose the wheat "history" of their farm, and accordingly, will not change the basis upon which their future wheat allotments will be established.

'Senior Citizens' Help Victory Garden Effort

The Oregon victory garden program is providing an outlet for the desires of many older citizens to contribute valuable service toward the war effort, reports O. T. McWhorter, extension horticulturist at Oregon State college. At a recent meeting one of these "senior citizens" who had retired from active life remarked that he had not grown a garden for several years but was going to this year.

"I used to grow a garden and this year I am getting back into the harness and will plant a garden to raise the food we need at home," he said.

McWhorter says he has encountered instances of this kind. Most of these older people have had previous farm experience and already know the fundamentals of good garden practice, but are interested in knowing about new developments in home gardening, new varieties and the like. Any who use their skill in this way will be making a valuable contribution toward the total war effort, says McWhorter.

Medium Type Hog Meets Modern Needs

With hog raising on the increase in Oregon, farmers are showing more interest in obtaining the most desirable types to meet market demands, says A. W. Oliver, swine specialist at Oregon State college.

Both federal and state research in this field has shown that the intermediate type hogs are the most practical and economical for market purposes. While all make about the same gain for the feed given them, the intermediate type finishes out at the most desirable size, and is believed to be superior in its all-round ability to meet present day market requirements, says Oliver. It has the weight advantage and is flexible enough to furnish a good market hog at weights of 200 to 235 pounds, or heavier if conditions warrant.

The recent release of federally-stored wheat for use as feed at attractive prices has also served to stimulate interest in hog production in this state.
