

High School Ag Faces Teacher Shortage

Oregon State College—An intensive search for young men qualified to handle agricultural teaching in high school Smith-Hughes departments has been started throughout the state by Earl R. Cooley, state supervisor of agricultural education, and H. H. Gibson, head of agricultural education at Oregon State college.

War services have so depleted the prospective supply of agricultural graduates preparing for teaching that those in charge of the work in Oregon fear that new agricultural departments planned by schools may have to be abandoned temporarily and even some existing departments discontinued unless additional teachers can be found.

Professor Gibson plans to go out through the state soon in search of prospective teachers and is asking that college graduates with background training in science, and with farm experience if possible, get in touch with him. Arrangements have been made for those interested to take certain courses at the college this spring if necessary to prepare for teaching. Men who for any reason are not subject to active military service are especially sought.

No Limit on Tin For Home Canning; Increase Desired

Plenty of tin cans will be available for home canners this year, Robert B. Taylor, chairman of the Oregon USDA war board, has been informed by the War Production board.

Tin cans for home canning are not included in the recent order restricting tin for commercial packing of many commodities, Taylor reported. Home canners can obtain all of the cans they need from their usual suppliers, and will not be required to present any kind of a priority certificate. Hardware stores and other distributors will be able to buy home-canning type cans from their manufacturers without restriction.

Home canning is being encouraged this year as a means of lifting some of the load from commercial canners, who have been asked for capacity packs of many fruits and vegetables. Oregon pea and tomato canners have been asked for a 25 percent increase over last year's pack, Taylor said, and bean and sweet corn canners are asked to operate at capacity.

"A 100 percent increase in home canning over 1941 will release a lot more of the commercial pack for other needs, including food for this country's armed forces and for those of other united nations," the war board chairman observed.

The War Production board's recent tin conservation order, designed to stretch one year's tin supplies over three year's needs, increases the amount of tin for canning basic foods such as peas, tomatoes, green peas, corn, asparagus, tomato juice and evaporated milk, Taylor pointed out. The order prohibits the use of tin for packing such items as dog food, coffee, tobacco, caviar, beer and motor oil.

Tin for packing many fruits and vegetables which can be preserved by drying is restricted to 75 percent of the 1940 requirements. In this group are apples, prunes, apricots, and freestone peaches. More home drying is expected this year as well.

OSC Pre-Medics Pass Entrance Tests

Oregon State College — Fifteen pre-medical students here have been accepted for entrance into medical schools this summer or fall, and four others are on the preferred list at the University of Oregon medical school in Portland for entrance in 1943 classes, according to Dr. Nathan Fasten, chairman of the pre-medical committee in the school of science.

Of those accepted 13 will enter the Oregon medical school in June under the new plan of speeding up the training by starting early in the summer instead of waiting until fall. One man has been accepted at Northwestern medical school, and a second will enter the St. Louis university medical school.

Ordinarily between 70 and 100 pre-medics students are enrolled in freshman and sophomore classes in the school of science at Oregon State. Most of those finishing the course enter the medical school in Portland.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT

I will again be a candidate for the office of County Treasurer on the Republican Primary Ballot, May 15, 1942, and ask for your support.

In past elections my democratic friends have written my name in on their primary ballots, thus making me their candidate also, a manifestation of friendship that I greatly prize.

I solicit the support of all voters and hope that I have proved myself worthy of the confidence reposed in me. LEON W. BRIGGS, Incumbent.

HOME PRODUCTION URGED

"Grow our own garden, meat, poultry, milk—for health, convenience, patriotism, conservation." This victory slogan for Oregon farm families is the title of a new six-page leaflet just issued at Oregon State college as extension circular No. 381. Each page is devoted to boiled-down suggestions on producing food for health, raising a victory garden, producing pork, beef, or lamb meat for home use. Copies may be had from any extension office.
