Official Paper for Morrow County

Forward, March!

Those of us who went wild-goose chasing after grain fires a few times last summer are relieved to learn of the fine progress being made toward perfecting a workable rural fire-fighting program for the coming season. The plans proposed are sensible and workable, as Director Tibbles says, not only in wartime emergency but in normal times.

It is this kind of conscientious, sensible planning that will give real protection, should invasion occur. It is up to everyone to become as self proficient as possible... That's the way the Jap soldiers on Hainan were trained before their treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor; and that's how the small Wake island force were able to withstand the overwhelming Nipponese tide for so long.

At Lions Monday, President J. O. Turner took the lead in suggesting a guerilla army for Morrow county. That proposal, given sanction by defense leaders and Governor Sprague himself as it has been carried out down in Tillamook county, needs to be considered. There are a lot of good deer slayers in Morrow county who have rifles that could be made good use of should an invasion occur. Lots of deer slayers with rifles do not get enough practice in using them on the one or two hunts a year. Practicing would not be amiss, though it only helped to fill the family larder the next open season.

Governor Sprague is asking that some military rating be given the organized guerilla bands, as reported this week by our Salem correspondent. The rating would be for protection of these soldiers in case of capture. Military rating would give them the right of prisoners of war; otherwise they would be subject to immediate execution.

Heppner's Boy Scouts are doing a consistently good job of paper collecting, and are entitled to public recognition for their patriotic handling of this job—not at all easy as they must sort and bale the paper after it is collected.

Wheat Insurance For Oregon Sets Record in 1942

Nearly half of the state's 1942 wheat crop will be protected against all risks by federal crop insurance, Clyde Kiddle, crop insurance assistant at the state AAA office, has just announced. Crop insurance will be in effect on the greatest number of Oregon farms since its introduction four years ago.

A total of 3802 applications for insurance have been received, covering 1942 wheat production on 6123 farms—1432 more than last year—Kiddle reported. An estimated production of over six million bushels on nearly 350,000 acres will be covered by crop insurance, he said. Winter wheat policies were written last fall for 5576 farms, and applications for spring wheat insurance on 547 farms were received in February, final reports show.

Insurance will be in effect in 26 counties. Umatilla has the largest number of farms, 1051, covered. Clackamas county is second with production insured on 814 farms.

Kiddle credited simplification of forms, introduction of a convenient note premium payment plan and a growing awareness of the protection afforded as reasons for the increase.

"Everything from birds to bugs took a bite out of Oregon's 1941 wheat crop," Kiddle said. "Nearly 1,300 claims were paid for 19 causes of loss, with plant diseases in western Oregon taking the largest toll. As more growers realize that crop insurance is protection against all hazards, more of them are deciding that they can't afford to be without it."

Dairy Unit Adds Income on Large Umatilla Ranch

Adams.—Combining dairying with wheat and canning peas on the A. R. and Bill Coppock farm four miles southeast of here has made it possible for two families to make a good living where only one did before and meet their food for Victory production goals easily at the same time.

The younger Coppock, Bill, takes care of the dairy end; and right now they are milking upwards of 20 cows, compared to only 8 or 10 that used to comprise this eastern Oregon herd. With calves and all, they have more than 50 head, to which they feed alfalfa and pea vine hay, pea vine silage and grain, with the roughages largely produced on the farm.

"I'm not in the dairy business because I think it's an easy way to make money," Bill said recently. "The cows have paid our way, and I figure that by keeping livestock on the place continually, we will be able to take better care of the land. Then, fifty years from now, when I move on, I'll have a farm to leave to our boy. Sure, straight farming is easier, but I don't believe we can hold our soil without livestock; I don't believe I would have a farm to leave to anybody after 50 more years of wheat and peas alone."

The elder Coppock manages the cash-crop part of the business on the 456-acre place, on which the combination plan was worked out with assistance of the Soil Conservation service.

"I believe livestock fits in very well with wheat and pea growing," he said, "especially with the AAA diversion running to 20 percent of the crop acreage next year. We are able to use the hay and pasture to produce a return through milk sold. I know of farmers who plant forage crops on land diverted from wheat, take a check from the government and never make use of the forage grown. By utilizing the hay and crested wheatgrass pasture, we really get paid twice!"

The Coppocks reported increased yields of grass, seed, and alfalfa hay, through the use of manure.

Help Arranged to Keep Alien Lands in Crops

The O. S. C. extension service will provide advisory service in helping maintain production on farm lands in Oregon formerly operated by aliens of enemy countries, according to an agreement reached at a conference of federal and state agencies concerned.

Maximum production on all farm lands will be necessary to meet food-for-victory goals, says W. L. Teutsch, assistant director of extension. Under the agreement reached the evacuation itself will be handled by three agencies, the Federal Social Security board, the Farm Security administration and the Farm Credit administration. The entire program is to be known as the War-time Adjustment program.
