Gardeners Advised to Use Slug Poison Early

Although the more severe winter weather this year has destroyed a large proportion of the field slugs, enough of these and of the larger gray garden slug are still active to cause considerable damage in gardens, says B. G. Thompson, associate entomologist at Oregon State college.

Broadcasting of bait over the garden area as soon as any seeding has been done is recommended as excellent low-priced insurance against slug damage. A combination metaldehyde, calcium arsenate and bran bait, now available commercially under various names, has proved highly effective in the past two years. It may be had in either loose or pellet form.

4-H Club Mobilization Called April 5 to 11

A 4-H club mobilization week will be observed both nationally and in Oregon from April 5 to 11, as this branch of the extension service marshals its full strength to aid in the war effort.

During the mobilization week approximately 1,500,000 farm boys and girls, and 150,000 volunteer local club leaders will be asked to pledge themselves for all out effort in a seven-point 4-H Victory program. This seven point program has been in effect as a defense measure for more than a year and now is to be intensified as part of the all-out war effort, states H. C. Seymour, state club leader.

Morrow county 4-H club boys and girls are being called on to produce more meat, dairy products, eggs and garden produce this year, according to C. D. Conrad, county agent.

Conrad states that much interest is being shown this year in 4-H garden projects with 26 garden club members now enrolled and preparing their gardens.

Red and green 4-H Victory buttons have been obtained and will be presented to all Morrow county club members during 4-H Mobilization week who have started Food for Victory projects.

Added interest is also being shown by the boys and girls in livestock and especially sheep projects this year, adds Conrad.

Any boy or girl desiring to enroll in agriculture or home economics 4-H projects and do that much more
