AMERICAN EAGLE 'ESCORTS' OREGON FOOD ACROSS SEA

America's allies are looking to this nation for food as well as guns, tanks and planes, and products from Oregon farms are helping in the battle against aggression all over the globe, the state USDA war board reports.

The American eagle symbol recently adopted as the U.S. "trademark" is flying over lend-lease shipments of Oregon cheese, dried and condensed milk, and eggs to feed the fighting forces of the United Nations. Because dairy and poultry products are this state's most important contributions to lendlease needs, the state war board asks farmers to make every effort to meet production goals established for these commodities.

Oregon's share of the 1942 national dairy production goal has been set at 1,590,000,000-a billion and a half-pounds of milk. Meeting this goal will require an 11 percent increase over last year's production. In the farm defense plan canvass last fall, Oregon farmers indicated that this goal could be attained.

Although there are 3 percent more milk cows on Oregon farms this year, a war board survey shows that milk production so far this year is lagging considerably short of the goal. Poor early pasture conditions are seen as mainly responsible for the lag in production. To overcome this, farmers are advised to feed heavier and give their cows better care. In most areas, prices are favorable to heavier feeding, the war board points out. The O. S. C. extension service has issued four new brief bulletins to aid dairy farmers with their production problems.

The government's policy on purchasing dairy products has not changed, the war board reports. Since January 1, the Agricultural Marketing administration has been buying an average of one million cases of condensed milk, nine million pounds of cheese and five million pounds of skim milk every week.

AMA stepped up its egg purchases recently to prevent heavy spring production from causing price slumps. Present rates of lay and the increase in numbers of hens in flocks on Oregon farms indicate that the goal for a 13 percent increase in egg production will be met.

OREGON CAN PLAY 26.00 BIG PART IN FOOD DRYING CAMPAIGN

Oregon's food-drying facilities, which exceed in volume those of any other state, can be made quickly available to further the nation's war effort in a gigantic food-drying program if national offfcials will cooperate by indicating the type and volume of foods needed and prices to be expected, according to a comprehensive report submitted to Washington by William A. Schoenfeld. dean and director of agriculture at Oregon State college.

Schoenfeld's request by Henry Hartman, head of horticultural research of the experiment station; E. H. Wiegand, head of the department of food industries, and O. T. McWhorter, extension horticulturist,

It shows that when the last detailed survey was made by the state department of agriculture in 1938, Oregon had 281 food driers of various types, capable of handling 100,-000 bushels of fresh produce per day. The government is already encouraging the dehydration of many types of vegetables and is seeking a large volume of dried foods for shipment all over the world. Without sacrifice of food values, dried foods are light in weight, of small volume, need no refrigeration, and keep long periods, according to the college men.

Even at present production levels, Oregon has about 15 million tons of

FUTURE FARMERS PLEDGE HELP IN RURAL WAR WORK

A seven-point wartime pledge was adopted by the Oregon Future Farmers of America in the annual convention at Oregon State college, attended by 480 delegates from 54 of the state's 55 chapters. The annual report of officers showed important war work already being carried on. but such activities will be redoubled in the year ahead, it was decided.

FFA students already have invested $25,748.73 in war savings stamps and bonds, while the various chapters have collected 471 tons of scrap metal as a direct aid in the war effort. Agricultural projects have been geared to the food-for-victory demands throughout the state, the report shows.

Elvan Pitney of Junction City was chosen state president; Alvin Kreger of Albany, vice-president; Willis Bailey, Enterprise, secretary; Jay Hooten, Roseburg, treasurer, and Jim Dial, LaGrande, reporter. Honorary State Farmer degrees were awarded George Angell, Oswego, representatie of the Oregon Farmer, and E. H. Greenwood, Portland, secretary of the Oregon Bankers association.

The seven-point wartim pledge follows:

"1. We are heartily in favor of continuing our basic program of work, which is fundamentally essential ... whether it be in time of war or in time of peace.

"2. Remain on the farm instead of taking jobs in the city in order that our training can be utilized to the bsst advantage in the production of food.

"3. Cooperate in a training program for city youth by helping to place them on farms and, where possible, help these urban youth become familiar with farm work.

"4. Conduct our farm projects in such a way that they will contribute most of the 'Food for Victory' program.

"5. Collect salvage material essential to the war effort.

"6. Asist in the repair and renovation of farm machinery on the home farm.

"7. Purchase war stamps and bonds."

fruits and 13 million tons of vegetables per year suitable for dehydration, the report points out. Oregon's wide diversity of crops, furthermore, would make a year-round drying program possible, with small fruits, cherries, and certain kinds of vegetables to be dried in summer, with apples, pears, potatoes, cabbage, and root crops to be dried the remainder of the year.

For 25 years the state college has carried on research in their drier construction and fruit-drying methods, which will be invaluable at this time, although additional research is needed in the case of vegetable dehydration, Dean Schoenfeld points out.
