Highways to Health

At the fighting fronts, on the high seas and at remote outposts Uncle Sam's fighting men eat ice cream regularly. The men at the front and those in training are getting a vital dairy food in its most popular form. The army and navy are even using the "mechanical cow" to make and serve milk and ice cream regularly, in out of the way posts.

Because we are sharing with our boys in service now ice cream may not be as plentiful at home as in days past. But remember, it's still one of the most nourishing and wholesome foods you can serve.

Ice cream is one of Group 4—Milk and Milk Products—of the Basic Seven that our government tells us to eat every day. Ice cream contains the same nutrients as milk in slightly different proportions and is an important source of vitamins and proteins. Like all other dairy products there is a tremendous demand for it. It is one of the few remaining foods for which you do not need ration stamps.

Serve ice cream as often as you can as part of your family meals. In the spirit of good sportsmanship your family, no doubt has reconciled itself to having less ice cream than before the war. One way to satisfy your family's craving for ice cream is to make it yourself. Here are suggestions for sherbets that will please the whole family.

LEMON MILK SHERBET

1 envelope plain gelatin
 4 cups milk
 ½ teaspoon salt
 1 1-3 cups granulated sugar
 ¾ cup lemon juice
 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
 Soak gelatin in one half cup of the milk in a bowl for five minutes. Then set bowl over boiling water and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Combine rest of the ingredients with the remaining milk. Stir in gelatin. Turn into freezing tray and freeze until set, without stirring. Serves 5 or 6.

ORANGE ICE

½ cup orange juice
 1-3 cup lemon juice
 1¼ cups sugar
 2 cups milk
 Add milk to mixture and place in freezing tray. When partly frozen, remove from tray and beat with an egg beater thoroughly. Return to freezing tray and allow to continue freezing until firm. Serves 6.
