Highways To Health

CASSEROLE COOKERY

Under wartime conditions simplicity of diet becomes essential. Most homemakers are carrying additional responsibilities and find less time for meal planning. In meeting such conditions casserole cookery is the delight of the homemaker with imagination and food sense. Although this is the oldest form of cookery, the meal-in-one recipes are a boon to present war-time cookery.

Two "don'ts" in casserole cookery—don't put too many flavors in to one combination. The perfect casserole dish is not made by combining all the left-overs in the refrigerator. And don't make too much so there is a left-over of the left-overs. And, of course, do bring the casserole to the table piping hot, with the bubbling contents at their savory best.

Potatoes, macaroni, spaghetti, rice and noodles are all plentiful and are good basic foods for casserole combinations. While dairy products are not on the list of abundant foods, there will be the usual amount for everyone if we use them wisely. And they are being used wisely when combined with any of these foods to make a tasty casserole dish.

The foods that are in greater abundance during various periods of the year are featured as the Victory Food specials. Cabbage is the victory food selection through March and is plentiful into April. Cabbage is an excellent source of Vitamin C, B1 and B2 and is also rich in calcium, phosphorus and iron. By using this vegetable freely now, homemakers will be taking the pressure off of less plentiful foods and will be serving their families a food important for its vitamins and minerals.

A golden cheese sauce adds appetite appeal to a casserole of cabbage and such a combination is filling enough to be served as a luncheon main dish.

Cabbage Casserole Style
Alternate layers of shredded cabbage, dotted with butter, and cheese sauce or creamy white sauce, bread or cracker crumbs. Top with grated cheese. Bake.

EXTRA PICTURE CANCELLED

Because it is being held over for the film "With the Marines at Talongar" showing in Portland theaters, "rawa" has had to be cancelled from the program of the Star theater. The picture was scheduled to be shown Sunday and Monday, March 26 and 27. The management has promised to bring it here at a later date, probably during June.

American Girls Help Start Bombing Missions

Eight trained hands—three pairs of them feminine—write at one station on the Chevrolet assembly line producing one of the great fighting weapons of this war, the Pratt & Whitney aircraft engine which powers America's best-known bombers and cargo planes. Capably supplying "manpower" to back up the armies of the United Nations, hundreds of women are at work in this plant, which is one of 17 in Chevrolet's nation-wide manufacturing system geared into the Pratt & Whitney aircraft engine assignment.
