Our Kind of FOREST MANAGEMENT takes a tree crop but leaves the woods!

THERE was a time when the trees of the abundant American forests stood on land needed for villages and farms. Forests were removed both for their timber and so that the land might be used.

Today we have enough farm land. Our remaining forest areas can be kept at the job of producing successive timber crops.

Under modern perpetual-yield management the forests produce the things we need, but the forest industries keep the woods—wooded. Through scientific cutting, maintenance of seed sources, and planting of nursery-grown stock, young, vigorous, forest growth replaces mature, slow-growing trees which need to be harvested.

This company and the forest industries generally have entered a period of managed, planned operations of the woods.

We're doing our best to stop food waste. 20% of our nation's food supply is wasted. In line with this saving we have a large stock of jars and jar fixtures of all kinds, so prepare to can large amounts. . . Canning keeps fresh and wholesome the goodness of harvest. . .

Asparagus is a member of the lily family and one of the first spring vegetables. Rich in vitamin C, it also is a good source of vitamin A and contains minerals—calcium, magnesium, potassium and iron in fair quantities. It also boasts some sodium phosphorous, chlorine and sulphur—so is one of your best canning vegetables.

A recently issued patent provides for canned pancakes which are neatly rolled and packed in the can like asparagus
