Choral Club Heard Over Air Sunday

Competing with an electrical storm which created much static in receiving sets, the Heppner Women's Choral club presented eight numbers of the first annual concert over station KWRC in Pendleton Sunday afternoon. The storm which swept over a large area broke over Pendleton about the time the chorus took to the air but despite the static interference many eager listeners were able to bring the program in. Comments from all around have been highly complimentary.

The chorus sang six numbers and Marylou Ferguson played two piano solos, adding many more names to her long list of admirers.

The group remained in Pendleton for dinner, hoping that the storm would be over, but those returning via Echo got into some of the worst of it.
