Highways To Health

Wherever Uncle Sam's fighting forces are to be found, ice cream is the favorite of foods. Just as nearly as possible ice cream is made available to all of them, because it is not only one of the best of all foods, but it has also proved of inestimable value in the maintenance of the fighters' morale.

Most of the important warships are equipped with fountain service which is equally popular among the officers and the enlisted men. Early in the war, navy officials recognized the importance of ice cream in the maintenance of the spirit of the sailors and availed themselves of every opportunity to develop this service as well as using it regularly and generously at meal time.

And navy menus don't just happen! Every food included in the diet of navy personnel, ashore or afloat, is there for a purpose. Highly skilled and trained technicians know every condition under which the men live—know their requirements—and make sure exactly what each food will do for those men before it is approved.

That is why it is significant that ice cream ranks so high on navy menus. It is not only a favorite food, but it also supplies valuable vitamins, proteins, and minerals. For that reason, wherever practical, the navy gets ice cream.

Ice cream is not as plentiful today as it was before the war because of this sharing with our armed forces. You may, for a while, see a bit more than over the last few months since this is the peak period in milk production and more milk and cream can be diverted to ice cream. So enjoy the ice cream you can get and in by chance it is a limited amount remember that the men and women in service are having considerably more per capita than civilians—and it is important that they get this valuable food.

At home, at service centers, at camp and station, with the army and with the fleet, ice cream serves in its rightful place in helping to maintain the health and morale of the nation.

WORD OF APPRECIATION

Being unable to greet the voters personally, I take this means of expressing my appreciation for the support given me in the recent primary election and to again pledge my best efforts in the conduct of the office of sheriff should you see fit to return me to the job in November.

Sincerely yours
C. J. D. BAUMAN

GOES TO WOODBURN

Ivan C. Parker, principal of Heppner high school the past year, left Tuesday morning for Woodburn to join his family. Parker expects to be called to the service shortly.
