We then toured some of the interesting spots. There were several taxis conducting these tours, and for $2.50 they took you to most of the places and let you out at each to take a gander. We saw the Jefferson Memorial, the Potomac river, Arlington Cemetery and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Lincoln Memorial, and many of the governmental buildings, including the White House and the Capitol. Oh yes, we also stopped at the old Lee House, which is full of old furniture, rugs, paintings, household goods of all kinds, showing what a typical Virginia mansion looked like. It was all there, including the wine cellar, servants' quarters, and even the crib the old mammy rocked the little kids in.

We next went to the Smithsonian Institute and the Museum of Natural History. We spent several hours in this place, but didn't begin to get around to see it all. We saw Lindbergh's airplane, the Spirit of St. Louis, and Wiley Post's plane, the Winnie Mae. Barney Oldfield's old racer was also an interesting spot in the auto display. They had all types of cars that you can imagine from the time they were first made. They even had the Pontiac that has the transparent body; the hood, fenders, top, etc. are made of plastic and you can see all the metal parts on the inside. Bob took a shine to the dinosaurs (?), and they really did make you stop and wonder. They are awfully big and some of them had terrible looking teeth. You can hardly name anything of historical interest to the world that isn't represented there. I would sure like to come back here when the war is over and spend more time looking over that old stuff.

Bob just about walked my legs off by midafternoon, and I was ready to strike for home about 4 p. m. I made the mistake of fooling around too long while the bus was loading up and got on after all the seats had been taken, so I was elected to stand up all the way back to Norfolk, a distance of about 216 miles. It was a tough grind after walking all day in Washington, and I was sure glad when the old bus came to a stop in Norfolk. It was too late for a streetcar so I had to take a taxi out to the camp and finally got to bed at 2 a. m. Monday morning.

GIVEN MEDICAL DISCHARGE

Bill Scrivner arrived home the first of the week from Camp Pendleton, Oceanside, Calif., where he has been in training in the U. S. Marine corps. He has been given a medical discharge from the service and has returned to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Scrivner of Eight Mile.

LEAVES FOR TEXAS

Pfc Wade Bothwell left Sunday for Barclay, Tex., to join the 72nd Field hospital corps after spending a furlough in Heppner with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Bothwell. Wade entered the service in November 1943 and spent the past six months at Bushnell General hospital at Brigham City, Utah.

HOME ON FURLOUGH

Earl Hogue is home on furlough from service overseas, spending the time with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tilman Hogue of Heppner and other relatives.

tial pies and marmalade for this year.

Lambs are pouring out of the mountains via trucks to railroad shipping points. In spite of the adverse forage conditions which were due to drought and a miserably cold spring in the mountains, the lamb are of a fine quality and uphold the fame of Morrow county and the Blue mountains for producing the world's finest. Many of the top quality lambs averaged a weight of 87 pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wehmer of Berkeley, Calif. and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Beckett, daughter Alma Lou and son Bobbie visited over the week-end at the old family home on Chase street, with the Fred Wehmeyers.

John Clouston, staff officer from the Pendleton Forest office and District Ranger Glenn Charlton of La Grande, were Heppner visitors on August 14. They were taking care of grazing administration work.

The Heppner Lumber company is busy surveying and clearing right of way on their logging road which will extend from the mouth of Shaw creek to Buckaroo Flats near the Whitman forest. This road is to be built to near state highway standards and large sections will be graveled.

The forest service is moving in a small crew under Foreman Perry Waldrip of Asotin, Wash. to better a large part of the Western Route road that now is located on the Swale Creek meadows. Parts will be removed and other parts will be graveled.

REMEMBER

One match, one cigarette, one careless act can start a raging fire in an Oregon forest. In the woods, BE CAREFUL, for wood is a critical war item filling more than 1200 military uses.
