PARENT TREE

... doing a job for tomorrow

A PARENT TREE ... is a seed tree. It is the "setting hen" of the woods, protected and maintained to insure a future generation of seedlings.

The leaving of parent trees in the woods is now standard practice in good forest management ... thirty years ago the idea was practically unheard of.

Most industrial forest operators now look after their seed trees with the same care that they maintain the big band saw in the mill ... the seed trees are insurance that the woods will continue to be woods and not just cut-over land.

Our seed trees are going to provide this community with a great deal of new wood in the future ... wood which will keep the payrolls rolling.
