When You Buy a Hat---

you don't care much whether the firm will stay in business or not; you expect no further servicing on your hat.

It is a different matter in selecting a life insurance company on which depends the future security of yourself upon retirement, or your wife and children if you go out of the picture earlier.

May we suggest you consider a company that has proved its qbaility to Stay and Pay?

Since 1845 the New York Life has operated economically for the benefit of its policyholders only. It has no stockholders.
