From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Jeb Wilkins loses the wanderlust

Jeb Wilkins was always a great one for traveling. Two weeks a year he used to cover more ground than a Pullman conductor. Used to come back from vacations tuckered out. But the war has changed all that. Gasoline shortages—and saving space on trains for service men—has got Jeb spending his vacations home ... and liking it!
"Never knew staying home could be such fun," says Jeb. "Outdoor barbecues ... sitting around and chatting with the kids and family ... basking in the sunshine with a glass of cold beer ... that's living," Jeb says.

From where I sit, Jeb's discovered what millions of other Americans have learned through the war. Whether your choice is beer or buttermilk ... horse shoes or checkers ... a quiet book or a bit of friendly conversation ... there's no place like home ... where we grumble the most and get treated the best!

At a time when all America is rejoicing over final Victory, it isn't easy to sound a somber note. But the effects of years of war cannot be erased overnight. The return to normal conditions will take place gradually—step by step.
So it is with the railroads ... with Union Pacific. Millions of men and women in service have yet to be returned to their homes. And, unfortunately, there will be others whose destination will be a hospital or rehabilitation center. Because Union Pacific is a transcontinental railroad, uniting the East with the West Coast, a large share of this job will fall on our shoulders. You want these men and women to be returned home with utmost speed—and so do we—but at best it will take months and the use of a large part of our passenger equipment.

For this reason we ask the civilian public not to expect an immediate betterment in the transportation situation. For the railroads, as for industry generally, there must be a period of reconversion.
So we say—please be patient. Normal peacetime operation will be resumed as quickly as possible and, as in the past, the progressive Union Pacific will provide unexcelled facilities and service.
