Live butts and the woods don't mix

YOU don't toss burning cigarettes around a powder plant.

But enough smokers toss burning cigarettes around forests to start 20,000 forest fires a year, more than a quarter of the total.

In years of average fire loss, smokers cause a national loss of more than $10,000,000 in our forests.

Few people realize how explosive a dry forest is in fire season . . . how, in a twinkling, a lone spark may be fanned into a roaring conflagration, destroying in a few hours what nature, aided by man, has taken years to produce.

A cigarette in a forest is a spark in a powder plant.
