How to HARNESS a Piece of FOREST LAND

If we can keep control of forces which interfere with natural evolution in the woods, millions of acres of timber land are capable of doing more work and contributing more substantially to the income of tributary communities.

FIRST and foremost, this means elimination of FIRE principal woodland threat. SECOND it means turning to count and not wasting fecundity by preserving and protecting seed sources and THIRD it means harvesting timber according to the capacity of nature to replace and grow new trees in a particular area.

Our management plans call for the harvesting of the inherent wealth in our timber lands for the future profit and benefit of the people of this community.

- ✓  KEEP FIRE OUT!
- ✓  LEAVE SEED TREES
- ✓  HAVE A PLAN.
