A PROMISE FOR OUR FOREST FUTURE

Nature is the best forest farmer of all, for these seed-bearing cones are bringing renewed life to a harvested forest.

By the thousands, winged seeds scatter over this land, starting another forest crop which will help keep America green.

Forest industries are dedicating themselves to this great task, which means we can use our trees and have them, too. Nature needs their help, because seed trees must be left to keep this land in fruitful production. The new crop of trees must be protected from fire. By such means, the third of America which consists of forest lands may continue to grow forest crops forever.
