

September Rains Above Average of Local Recordings

10-year Average For Month Bested By .70 of an Inch

A total of 1.52 inches of rainfall is recorded in Heppner to date this month, which is already .26 inches more rainfall than the entire month of September last year, reports kept by Len Gilliam, county observer and operator of the official weather bureau for Heppner, showed today.

Ten year averages for September between the 30 year period of 1910 to 1940 showed the average rainfall for that month to be .40, records indicated. One of the highest September rainfalls for September recorded was 2.21 inches of rain in 1940.

The average rainfall so far this year is .990. The annual rainfall last year was 15.84 inches, which was above average, Gilliam said. The heaviest monthly rainfall this year was in May with 2.33 inches and one of the heaviest monthly rainfalls recorded was in May of last year with 2.74.

While Gilliam refused to predict the weather for the coming month, only 51 inches of rain fell in October 1945 and .78 inches in October 1944.

The average rainfall in Heppner for the past 36 years is 12.74 inches. Rainfall during the past five or six years has been considerably heavier than the 10 or 15 year period previous, according to the weather reports.

Rainfall reports have been kept by the Gilliams for nearly 40 years. The late Frank Gilliam kept the records for nearly 25 years, and Len Gilliam took over the recording in 1933 following his father's death.
