Sun Valley's Co-Ed Skiers

The comeliest feminine skiers in the country are among the youthful entrants competing in Sun Valley's annual inter-collegiate ski meet. A few of this winter's co-ed racers line up before heading for the starting line. Some of the girls wear dark glasses as protection against the clear sunlight at the mile-high Idaho resort.

WEED SPECIALISTS URGE SEVERAL CONTROL PLANS

Both chemical and cultural methods have their place in weed control, depending on the size of infestation and urgency of eradication, delegates to the recent Western State Weed Control conference in Portland decided. All agreed that farmer interest in weed control is at an all time high, and has come, fortunately, at the same time that spectacular new methods have been developed. Research workers from nearly all states reported on 24-D results, showing many successful uses. They cautioned, however, against considering it a panacea for all weed troubles. In this connection, Dr. D. D. Hill, farm crops head at O.S.C., declared nothing yet takes the place of good farming. Killing as many weeds by cultivation in advance of planting crops, and use of chemicals to eradicate small patches of perennial weeds as soon as they appear were other practices recommended.

FOUR YOUTHS ENLIST IN ARMY FROM THIS AREA
