Gloves Are Cupid's Gifts

Virginia Mayo, one of Hollywood's new stars, wraps a special gift for an extra-special friend. When he opens it on Feb. 14, he'll find a man's glove wardrobe—capskins for business, grey mochas for evening, pigskins for sports—all American-made.

Movie star Joan Crawford is in a pensive mood as she opens a St. Valentine's gift of gloves from an admirer. It's a pair of American-made pigskins, a welcome addition to the wardrobe of gloves Joan maintains for formal, street and sports wear.

fine leather gloves that they would roll a glove into a tiny ball and place it inside a locket to be worn around the neck. In the early 1500's, Queen Elizabeth of England owned almost 2,000 pairs of gloves, all gifts of admirers.

One doesn't have to be a king or queen to wear fine gloves today. American manufacturers use the world's best methods of tanning leather. The American-made leather glove is second to none.

St. Valentine's Day is the appropriate day for all of us to express affection for one another. It is an ideal opportunity to revive the gracious custom of giving gloves for love.

A HONEY OF AN IDEA

It is a honey of an idea if it involves honey. Many homemakers overlook the value of this natural, unrefined, nutritionally valuable food as a substitute when sugar supplies run low.

Honey is made up mainly of three sugars—34% dextrose, 40% levulose and 1% sucrose. Levulose, known as the queen of sugars, is twice as sweet as cane sugar and occurs naturally in many fruits. Dextrose (grape sugar) is about half as sweet as cane sugar and is the component which may cause the honey in your jar to granulate.

Honey is an easily digested food and is an excellent source of readily available energy for growing children—and adults, too, for that matter. It contains small quantities of various minerals and vitamins necessary for good nutrition. Since bacteria which cause diseases in human beings cannot live in honey, it is considered a safe wholesome food. And it has been recognized as a satisfactory supplement to milk in infant feeding.

Honey may be used in dozens of ways in the home—it offers many possibilities in canning and preserving. Its advantage in being able to absorb and retain moisture in cakes and cookies is of great importance to the homemaker who wishes to do her baking in advance. Honey is a delicious spread for bread. It may be used on fruit and cereals, as a sweetening for milk, cocoa, tea or coffee, and in cakes and cookies, just to mention a few ways.

There are a number of delicious, nutritious ways to combine honey with milk, butter, cheese and ice cream to increase the flavor and nourishment of both. We'd like to pass these honey hints on to you. For luscious sandwiches, blend honey with cream cheese for a sandwich treat. To make a delicious spread for toast or waffles, blend 1/2 cup butter with 1 cup of honey. Let both stand in a warm place to blend well then beat until smooth. Spread the honey butter in a jar in the refrigerator.

Milk and honey are every bit as good together as they sound. For a between-meal pickup or a nightcap, add 2 tsp. of honey to a glass of warm milk. Try this delicious yet simple hurry-up dessert when time runs short in the kitchen: pour honey over vanilla ice cream, sprinkle nuts on top or garnish with a cherry.

As for keeping, liquid honey should be kept in a dry place at room temperature. Freezing will not harm color or flavor but may hasten granulation. Do not put honey in the refrigerator. If you have storage space it is more economical to buy honey in large size containers.

It's On the Way!
