Jaycees to Enter Float at Milton-Freewater Festival

High School Elects Queen and Court For Special Event

Pine trees will form the motif of a float being prepared by the Heppner junior chamber of commerce for entry in the parade at the annual pea festival in Milton-Freewater Saturday. The Jaycees are going to the festival prepared to show the people assembled there that Heppner is on the map and has a definite object in being alive.

The high school student body entered into a spirited election Tuesday when a queen and attendants to ride on the float. Result of the election was to choose Joan Hilsor for queen, and Lorene Van Winkle, Betty Keeton, Francine Hilsor and Colleen Connor as attendants.

Coming at the right time to make the float feasible is a new trailer recently purchased by the county and which the court has generously offered to lend to the Jaycees. The trailer is of sufficient size to accommodate quite an elaborate imitation forest and a miniature sawmill. The beauty of high school beauties will add distinctive color to the float designed to display one out of the county's rich resources.

Those in charge of the float will leave at 5 a. m. Saturday in order to be on time for the parade. The parade chairman at Milton has asked that all floats be parked in an arroyo opposite the McLaughlin high school following the parade so the visitors may have a look at them if they wish.

Some Folks Take Exception To Sportsmen's Plan to War On Crow and Magpie Flocks

Announcement by the Morrow County Sportsmen's association that plans to be laid for the annual crow and magpie contest brought response from one Morrow county farmer who says it is a mistake to wage war on these so-called scavenger birds.

Arnold Pieper, Lexington wheatraiser, says the crows are valuable to the wheat man because they destroy field mice or kangaroo rats. He cited an article contributed to the East Oregonian by Judge Jess Allen of Grant county in which it is pointed out that magpies are the friend of man inasmuch as they destroy the Rocky Mountain spotted tick. Says Judge Allen:

"In one end of our valley, the magpie is catching the Rocky Mountain spotted tick. The tick has claimed the lives of a great many citizens. The magpie is branded as an outlaw, a traitor, a menace to mankind, yet he is working every minute of the day trying to save the lives of the ones who hate and despise him. His numbers have increased in the past few years, and whereas the hills are literally alive with sage ticks, now the tick is almost extinct, all because the magpie stripped the entire hills. The writer has checked with several persons, who claim there are only a very, very few ticks."

"Yes, man is working hard to destroy himself. He'll catch and kill the magpie while the magpie strives to save lives. He has

Veteran Groups to Present Program On Decoration Day

Veteran groups including the American Legion, American Legion auxiliary and the Veterans of foreign wars are preparing a program to be presented the morning of May 30, probably in the Star theater. Music numbers have been arranged for, including the Heppner Womens chorus and Mrs. C. C. Dunham, soloist. The committee is looking for a speaker and will use local talent if available.

It is hoped by announcing plans at an early date that more people will attend the service. Last year, the first service following the war, only a handful of people turned out due to the fact that advance notice of the program was lacking. There was a good program but too few people to enjoy it.

Heppner Continues Nosedive Towards W-T League Cellar

Fossil Takes Long End of 9-6 Score In Sunday's Game

Heppner continued its nosedive towards the cellar in the Wheat-Timber league when Fossil came over and took the long end of a 9-6 score Sunday afternoon. It was not that Fossil was exactly hot, but the fact that Heppner was cold. Fossil was warm enough to keep ahead all the way and that lead was challenged only once, in the seventh inning, when Heppner thawed out for a few minutes and looked like a ball team.

Pitching honors were about even between Broadfoot for Heppner and Prindle for Fossil. The difference was in the fielding of the two teams. No matter where the Heppner batters batted their flies a Fossil outfielder got under it. Only one got away and that was when the other Prindle dropped it in right field. Broadfoot, a slugger of big league proportions, was still suffering from the effects of a sprained ankle and did not swing on 'em with his usual power.

Harry Van Horn, Heppner second baseman, was retired in the sixth inning when shortstop McCurdy spiked his foot when both were chasing a hit ball. Hoyt was shifted to second and Don Grady took the catcher's mitt the rest of the way.

Heppner goes to Wasco this week to try to redeem its position in the league.

Court Will Seek Extra Levy to Meet Heavier Operating Expenses

When the 1947-1948 fiscal budget is made up for the county it will include an approximate seven mill increase which the county court feels obliged to include if certain obligations and operations are to be carried on. Chief among the items figuring in the increase are the road fund, clerical hire and the county hospital. The first two items are self-explanatory—road maintenance, labor, equipment, all higher as well as clerical hire—and it is with the hospital situation we are mostly concerned at this writing.

As explained last week, possibility of obtaining a federal grant short of a year is remote and if time were not a factor the possibility of obtaining the grant lacks definite assurance, which leaves the court and the hospital committee out on a limb, as it were. To meet the need for a hospital, and it might better be said the demand for it, the court is taking a short cut by including in the budget a millage levy to provide the $80,000 estimated as needed over and above the original sum raised in 1945 and 1946.

The county court wants it known that that body is not trying to delay construction of the hospital. They also want it to be known that everything within reason is being done to get the building program under way but that one hurdle after another has had to be cleared and the course is not yet run. Ample financing must be in hand before contracts can be

Government Trapper Hangs Up Record With Bag of 146 Coyotes in Month of April

By Joe Cjjetson, Assistant Ranger
One hundred forty-six coyotes constitutes a mighty pack of cut-throats in any man's language. To "Carli the Coyote Killer," this represents a month's work. April is to be exact. This quiet, unassuming Heppnerite established an all time record when he reported his April kill to Harold Dobyns, junior district agent of eastern Oregon. His reports accredited him with 350 known coyotes since January 1, 1941.

All westerners are familiar with Canis Latrans, the crafty brush wolf or coyote. He is known to be a clean killer of sheep, often devouring the liver only before singling out another luckless victim. Pups only five months old will haul down a lamb and mutilate it to death, not a pretty sight as Carl has witnessed.

Stock raising represents the backbone industry of the West. With the ingress of sheep and cattle, predators increased proportionately to a point where unattended stock were in constant danger. Uncle Sam shouldered the new responsibility and appointed picked men to fight this increasing menace. Carl McDaniels is one of these selections, and a good one. These men receive little publicity, sometimes are wrongfully accused. Their work is destroying predators such as coyote, wolf, cougar, bobcat, or marauding bear, is not always of pulp-magazine caliber. It

After about 15 years of conscientious work, the gifted trapper becomes wise to the countless tricks and problems of his work. The ability to read signs is not a sole gift of the Indian. An accomplished trapper can tell whether the sign is that of a yearling, a male or female adult, and whether it is a den or hunting sign. A den sign is always favored because it will lead to the capture of a pup litter. Although the record catch for April included 134 pups, we must remember that a five month old coyote becomes a killer. Dogs are sometimes used to moirns long hours of hunting or tracking through every kind of weather, pushing a weary saddle horse through another mile, or hiking over miles of rough terrain with heavy pack. To succeed in this work the man must be at home on a range land or in the hills, a rugged individualist with a clear eye and steady hand, capable of subsisting on a donkey diet. But all is not hardship with these men. Carl has had the unique satisfaction of killing 17 consecutive coyotes with that many shots. His ability with the rifle on running targets is close to uncanny. "All you have to do is lead 'em like a dog," he says. Maybe he's right but many old yodlers still roam the hills after coming in contact with the average nimrod.
