FARMERS OF Tomorrow!

Margaret Freudenthal, president Hillsboro 4-H Club girl, is proud of her Holstein heifer. Her reputation, she thinks, is always high at feeding time.

MAKING THE BEST BETTER

Oregon farmers take many precautions to insure the agricultural future of the state. Of all the safeguards of tomorrow, however, there are none that offer greater assurance than the training and opportunity being provided for the youth of today. Through the effort and foresight of those who cherish the soil, the farmers of tomorrow are preparing themselves for the tasks and responsibilities that lie ahead.

One of the important phases of youth education is the opportunity being provided both nationally and locally through 4-H Club projects.

4-H Clubs in Oregon, over a period of many years, have provided the background, experience, and inspiration for thousands of young men and women. 4-H training has helped them become better farmers... better parents... and better citizens.

Prominent in Oregon 4-H Club work is Margaret Freudenthal of Hillsboro. Margaret, a graduate of Hillsboro High School, has completed her seventh year of 4-H Club work and will enter Oregon State College in September. Leader of the Hillsboro Dairy Club, Miss Freudenthal last Fall won the regional Dairy Production contest sponsored annually by the Kraft Company. In winning this contest she competed against 4-H Club members in the eleven western states.

As her contest award Margaret was given a trip to Chicago where she participated in the national 4-H competition last December.

In 1945 Margaret won the Oregon Holstein contest and was awarded a heifer for her distinguished work. Margaret, as is typical of 4-H members, excels in school work and student activities. In high school she has served on the debating team, participated in school dramatics, was consistently an A student, and played a prominent part in many scholastic and athletic events. Her hobbies include horseback riding and rifle marksmanship, a long string of trophies attesting to her ability with the rifle.

Margaret is a remarkable example of the thousands of high-type young men and women who take part annually in 4-H Club activities. She personifies the spirit of accomplishment and good citizenship which characterizes the 4-H ideal.

The First National Bank of Portland has long interested itself in the advancement of 4-H Clubs, the Future Farmers of America, and all other groups which have for their purpose the cultivation of youthful initiative, ability, and character. Through active participation in their work, the First National has seen the youth of Oregon grow and develop into wholesome and mature citizenship.
