Steelhead Fishing Regulations Cited

Working jointly, the stream improvement crews of the fish commission and game commission cleared a passageway for fish migrating up Rock creek, one of the main tributaries of the Nehalem river, when they recently blew out the 22-foot high concrete dam at Keasey formerly used by the Western Oregon Electric cooperative. While a fishway had been provided over the dam, removal of most of the structure itself provides better access to the spawning grounds upstream for the migratory fish runs, particularly the steelhead.

Attention of steelhead and salmon anglers is called again to the fact that the new regulation passed by the game commission closes the coastal waters to salmon and steelhead fishing during the months of March and April. The closure serves to reduce the angling intensity on these waters and to give protection to the breeder stocks, particularly of steelhead and cutthroat during the spawning period. The order covers all those waters, including lakes, that are tributary directly or indirectly to that part of the Columbia river below the northern city limits of St. Helens, and those waters, including lakes, south of the Columbia river that are directly or indirectly tributary to the Pacific ocean.

Excluded from this order are the main Columbia, all of which will be open, as well as those tributaries that empty into the Columbia east of St. Helens. The Willamette river and its tributaries, therefore, will be open to spring chinook salmon fishing as in former years.

The annual three-day fisheries

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wilson of Stanfield were Sunday visitors at the Charles McFall home, as were their son Jack and family of Hermiston.

Jack Zabransky and Norma Matheny of Olex spent Sunday with their families, as did also Betty Acock of Pendleton and James Shoun of Walla Walla.

Mr. and Mrs. Lavern Williams of Kendrick, Idaho, spent Sunday with the James Henderson family.

Roy Minnick of Boardman was an Irrigon visitor Monday evening.

Mrs. Marshall Markham, Mrs. Benny McCoy and Mrs. Earl Isom sponsored a wedding shower at the Mart Abken home Friday evening for Mrs. Rogie Hinkley.

Games, opening of a nice selection of gifts and refreshments of coffee, cake and ice cream finished the evening. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Weigand, sister of Mrs. Hinkley, and small daughters, and Mrs. Russell Woods of Patterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kase of Alice visited at the John Zabransky home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Kinche-loe and small baby were Sunday night visitors at the Carl Knight home. They were coming from Portland and going on to Vale where they and the H. H. Kinche-loe have homes.
