News From C. A. Office

A new breed of chickens that is beginning to receive considerable attention is the Delaware that is designed for meat and egg production with emphasis on meat for broilers.

The Delaware was developed from sports or off colored chicks that occurred in the crossing of Barred Rock cockerels and New Hampshire hens. They have white feathers on the neck, and barred primary and secondary wing and tail feathers. They have been quite popular for broilers because they are fast growing, rapid feathering, have a plump breast, and white body feathers. The white body feathers eliminate the dark pin feathers.

While we are talking chicken it might be interesting to note that the average lay per hen for Oregon last year was 177 eggs. This is 19 more eggs per hen than the average for the United States. The average egg production in Oregon could be substantially increased if producers would replace a much higher proportion of their flocks with a fresh supply of pullets each year. On January 1, 1948, there were 3,149,000 laying hens in Oregon. Only 56 per cent were pullets and 44 per cent old hens. At least 75 per cent or more should be pullets because they will lay from 25 to 30 per cent more eggs than the old hens.

A preliminary survey report put out by the Oregon Wheat Commission covering the 1947 wheat tax returns to date provides some interesting facts. This summary is made on 31 million, seventy-six thousand bushels of wheat.

Eastern Oregon counties produced 89 per cent of the commercial wheat in the state. Breaking the report down to Morrow, Gilliam, Sherman and Wasco counties shows that these counties sold a total of five million, eighty-two thousand bushels.

Of this the percent of varieties grown showed Baart, one tenth of one percent; Federation, eighteen and two tenths percent; Forty-fold, three percent; Orofed, one half of one percent; Rex, twenty-five and nine-tenths percent; other soft white, five and seven tenths percent; Club (Eigin and Alice), forty-one and one-tenth percent; Hard Red Winter, five and two tenths percent; Soft Red Winter, one tenth of one percent; Hard Red Spring, two tenths of one percent.

Smut was shown in 12 per cent of the Club and Golden varieties, in 4 percent of the Turkey and Federation and in 2.5 percent of the Rex. Morrow county's report shows 5 percent of the wheat sold as smutty.

Jack Cavender, Rhea Creek, has just completed two large trench silos which he will use for storage of his alfalfa hay. The alfalfa is being chopped in the field, hauled to the silo for ensiling.

The use of grass and legume silage is becoming more popular each year and in some sections of the Willamette valley all of the first cuttings of grass and legumes are ensiled. Experiments with grass and legume ensilage show that more butterfat is produced per acre than when made into hay, even if hay drying conditions are perfect. It was also found that about 16% more milk per acre can be realized by feeding alfalfa ensilage than by cutting the crop for hay. Field drying of alfalfa hay gave 76 pounds less protein per acre than the silage.

With the abundance of rainfall

AN APPEAL FOR AID

It having come to the attention of this organization that facilities of the Salvation Army are being taxed to meet the relief work resulting from flood conditions in Portland, is sponsoring a drive for food and clothing to be forwarded to the Salvation Army in Portland for distribution among flood sufferers.

THE HEPPNER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Containers -- boxes, cartons, packages, etc.-- will be received at the City Hall in Heppner up to June 25. Shipment will be made by truck from Heppner no later than Monday June 28. The Heppner Chamber of Commerce will bear the shipping expense. Contributions from Lexington and Ione may be picked up at those points by the truck leaving Heppner.

All clothing must be clean and compactly packaged to take as little room as possible. Food shipped in glass containers must be carefully packed. Better still, send cases of food put up in tins or cartons. Cash donations will be received at the First National Bank of Portland, Heppner Branch.

This is our chance to remember June 14, 1903 by doing unto others as we were done by. Let us have a generous response!
