

Flash Flood Does Heavy Damage To Property In Kinzua

By Elsa M. Leathers
The storm Thursday evening that did so much damage in several counties didn't pass Kinzua up. The flash flood came from off the north hills. Only one home, that of Frank Wilson, was damaged to any extent when the water ran through it about three and a half feet deep. The Ray Woods furniture was removed from their house near the Wilson home. The pasture, Jefferey hall and the ladies' club kitchen had more rock, mud and water than any other place. Debris was about two feet deep in the kitchen and an estimate of two feet of water in the hall and kitchen. Pastime stock room and motors were badly damaged. The postoffice also had its share of about two feet.

The mercantile store lost considerable merchandise that was stored in the basement where the water got several feet deep. The factory and planer had greater loss. The flood washed away foundations letting the floor and valuable materials go into the main creek channel. Men crews worked all night to no avail. The mill had only minor damage, with about one foot of water.

Several bridges and any number of miles of roadbeds were washed away. A large crew of Carl Coleman's men from Camp 5 have been working long hours to rebuild it.

Only the mill is operating. No time has yet been set to begin work at the plant.

Considerable damage was done to yards and gardens and roads. The mail and freight is being brought to Kinzua by truck. However, very little shortage has been experienced as yet.

It was in this same storm and flood that Mrs. Wm. Rhett and

Because of the poor condition of the streets, the budget committee found it necessary to provide funds outside of the 6% limitation to make it possible to carry on a reasonable amount of repair work this year.

We urge your earnest consideration of the budget and the improvement program. Any member of the City Council or the Budget Committee will be glad to explain features of the budget you may not understand. If you are well informed we are sure you will vote for a
