

News About Town

Miss Helen Phelan arrived Tuesday afternoon via United Airlines from San Francisco to visit for a fortnight with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Phelan. Miss Phelan is convalescing from a major operation which she underwent recently at a San Francisco hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Herbison are the parents of a daughter born Sunday, June 27, at St. Anthony's hospital in Pendleton. Among those from Heppner spending the week end at Lehigh Springs were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Whittle, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hodge Jr., Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne Van Marter, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cohn, Miss Harriet Ball, Gene Hall, Jackson Holt, Wade Bothwell and Don Bennett. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Allyn of Portland were week-end visitors in Heppner.

According to reports, Mrs. Loren Cole has purchased the residential property of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis. The Davis' will move into the Case apartments on Main street. Mrs. Emma Evans and Mrs. Sara McNamer were hostesses for a dinner Thursday evening at the Evans apartment in the Hiatt building complimenting Rev. Neville Blunt and Mrs. Blunt. Other guests were Miss Margaret Gillis and Mrs. Lucy E. Rodgers. Mrs. Oscar Rippey was over from her new home in Condon Tuesday, coming to attend a bridge party given by Mrs. Merle Becket. The Rippeys have purchased a home in Condon and are comfortably settled. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Allyn drove up from Portland Saturday to spend the week end with relatives. They were accompanied by Jim Cowins who spent several

Mt. Hood Loop Highway Motorlog Exhibits Many Scenic Contrasts

This is a reproduction of a motorlog article appearing in The Sunday Oregonian. It was prepared by The Oregonian in co-operation with the Oregon State Motor Association. The writer is Lewis H. Brown, 1000 N. Main, Portland, Ore.

DEAR BOB:
You'll remember the days back at the University of Iowa when you used to brag, with tongue in cheek, about the fishing in the Skunk river near your home town of Brighton and I would counter with tall tales of the Canadian woods? And maybe you haven't forgotten the trip we both took during the Christmas holidays into the logging camps north of the Minnesota border? That was pretty nice country. I still get a little sentimental thinking about it sometimes, but not so much as I used to, now that I've been getting around Oregon a little by automobile. It's hard to touch this country, Bob, because no matter what you have back home, Oregon has more of it—and it's generally a lot bigger.

My best bet is to tell you about what might be described as a trip seeing Oregon in miniature—a 175-mile drive over a route popularly known as the Mt. Hood loop because the highway runs from Portland through wonderfully varied farm and timber country over the shoulder of Mt. Hood. It then drops from a 6000-foot elevation down to Hood River, capital of Oregon's apple country, and then hugs the banks of the Columbia river back into Portland for some 86 miles. Beth and I, with Karen and Kip holding down the back seat, took off one Sunday morning to make a leisurely trip over the Mt. Hood loop, breaking it up in the middle with an overnight stay at Timberline lodge, Oregon's deservedly famous ski resort.

But Oregon, as I suggested before, Bob, is a land of contrasts. You jump from metropolitan Portland right into the biggest and quietest forest areas in the country in a short half-hour of travel. One of these contrasts we met up with outside of Brightwood, 39 miles from the city. Here we visited a huge log stockade built in early-day pioneer fashion near the roadside. It was like something out of a Hollywood movie setting of the Indian days. Inside the stockade we watched nearly 50 Umattilla

The writer snapped this picture of a deer licking at a rock in the center of the Robin Hood forest camping grounds.

Indians, dressed in buckskin moccasins, loin cloths and plenty of beads and feathers, turn back the pages of history to the first coming of the white man.

We took off then for Zig Zag, practically buried in tall timber, where the forest service maintains one of the series of ranger stations which dot the Mt. Hood National forest with wild flowers. Zig Zag we drove into a quiet side road which offered an irresistible invitation to see "the most beautiful golf course in America."

The entire Mt. Hood area is a riot of color about this time. Bob, Rhododendrons lift their heads, against hillsides dotted with wild flowers. When you drive from Rhododendron, still on highway 50, you eventually reach Government Camp, used by thousands of skiers as a base for operations in the winter months.

From Government Camp you turn to the left at Timberline junction and then you begin climbing over six miles of road which lifts you from an elevation of nearly 4000 feet to a height of 6000 feet to Timberline lodge. Timberline, which you may have seen featured in Life magazine a few months ago, is a monument to the skills of WPA workers of the depression years. Motorists, crowding out from Portland over the week ends, generally fill up the well kept forest service camps on the south or city-side of Mt. Hood. But on the north side, on loop highway 35 twisting and dropping its way to Hood River, there are several camps virtually free of visitors during quiet periods of the week.

On that side, too, is famous Cloud Cap Inn. At Robin Hood forest camp, about 14 miles from Timberline junction, we rolled quietly over pine needles into a grove of pine trees to make our first stop for a picnic lunch.

In the center of the camp grounds, peacefully licking at a rock, was a deer. It lifted its head for a moment to look at us, then dropped it again. With even the kids quiet for a change, I slid out the door with my camera, took one quick camera shot. Hood River is a beauty spot, with Mt. Hood in one direction and Mt. Adams in Washington in the other. In between the great apple valley lies like a green and brown carpet.

The best, Ron and Beth, Kip and Karen.

FLOOD NECESSITATES SALVAGE OPERATION

As soon as the flood waters recede from the thousands of acres that are now inundated along the Columbia river, the Oregon State Game commission plans to start salvaging game fish that will be left stranded. It was pointed out by C. A. Lockwood, state game supervisor, that many men will have to be brought in from the field to assist in this work. As the waters go down, it will be vital to have a big crew operating because in a matter of a few days the land will be dry and many thousands of fish will be lost unless the salvaging activities can be speedily carried out. Mr. Lockwood stated. WERE STILL SELLING HAIL INSURANCE! Turner, Van Marter & Co.

Four Winners In 4-H County Program To Get Silver Medals

Four rural youths in this county are eligible to receive sterling silver medals of honor this year for having top records in the 1948 National 4-H Home Improvement awards program, according to G. L. Noel, director of the national 4-H club committee. By taking part in the program members learn how to make home improvements for beauty, comfort, health and safety in keeping with the needs of every member of the family, and at minimum cost. They also demonstrate to others what has been learned relative to home furnishings, arrangements and practices. The highest rating county winner between 14 and 21 years old is selected to receive the state award of a Chicago 4-H club congress trip, provided by Sears-Roebuck foundation. Eight state winners named for national honors each receives a $200 college scholarship.

Last year's state winner in Oregon was Otto Sack Jr., Portland. Winners of county medals in 1947 were Margaret Austin, Clatskanie; Margaret Zundel, Clatsop; Marilyn Welter, Birdella

Nance, Donna Roberts of Jefferson; Margaret Shafer, Merle Peterson and Marjorie Redberg, Tillamook; Tylene Horn, Umattilla; Bob Pohl, Portland; Nina Jean Mendenhall, Yamhill.
