RURAL HOUSING
A NEW STANDARD FOR LIVING
A company which manufactures a "package" house from porcelain enameled steel has for its slogan, "A New Standard for Living." Perhaps the feature of easy cleaning prompted the choice of this slogan. Only soap, water and a cloth are needed to make it shine like new. Perhaps the lasting quality of the house was expressed in the slogan. With steel construction throughout, neither fire nor flood nor insect nor time can destroy it. Its porcelain finish on walls and roof never has to be replaced, according to the manufacturer's claims. The basementless, one-story house can be erected in about three days after the concrete slab has been completed. There are

Washington Week

By CHARLES L. EGENROAD

Washington, D. C.—Dear Alben (Senator Alben W. Barkley, that is):

Washington Week heard your stirring, if somewhat incomplete, keynote address Monday night. Since you mentioned that time did not permit you to elucidate all of the points of the New Deal, we feel inclined to make this column available for that purpose.

Naturally, you claimed the praises for the New Deal and voiced the criticisms of the Republicans. No one expected otherwise.

However, it was probably the lack of time, since you had only one hour and 13 minutes to speak, which prompted your rapid survey of the international situation as a mess being administered in a bipartisan manner thru the efforts of the Republican Congress. What you did not have time to say was that the mess started at Yalta, Cairo, Teheran, Potsdam and a few other places where the New Deal sat ALONE and you hope to make this appear as a bipartisan mess.

So partisan were the Allied agreement conferences that it was necessary to FORCE from President Truman by Senate Resolution No. 213 a report of the agreements which he claimed Russia was violating.

This report of the violations was filed last June 2, and we note with interest that Mr. Truman, who sat in the final conference at Potsdam without advantage of bipartisan alibi, does not accuse the Russians of violation of the rights to a corridor into Berlin.

You see, Dear Alben, the whole international scheme of the New Deal only became a bipartisan proposition AFTER it became a mess.

Another item or two you did not have time to clarify: that the New Deal still had 11 million unemployed after eight years of breathing into the nostrils of industry; that the national debt was far from wholly inherited from the war; that a couple of the best recovery ideas of which you boasted were Republican ideas, and that it was Truman who vetoed the tax-reduction and Taft-Hartley bills.

It was obvious that your hour and 13 minutes was all too insufficient, Dear Alben, like you say. At the finish, you had covered only the records of the two Presidents who last led us into hateful war, plus the single casual mention by name of the current President and political issue—a Mr. Truman.

Why, bless you Dear Alben, that hour and 13 minutes was only an introduction, wasn't it?
