Ex-GI's Returning To School Advised On Obtaining Benefits

Ex-GI's who plan to attend Oregon colleges this fall are offered pointers today by Charles M. Cox, Veterans Administration representative for this area, toward assuring full financial benefits due them.
"Action now will avoid the usual last-week rush and the delays that sometimes go with it," Cox advised.
The check list, which the VA aide suggested can be clipped and saved by GI students, follows:
1. If entering training for the first time, be sure to have a properly signed certificate of eligibility by registration day. A certificate may be requested thru any VA office.
2. If you have been in training before and will return to the same school, and you have not taken a GI course elsewhere in the intervening period, apply directly to the school to enroll. Your original certificate of eligibility is still in effect.
3. If you have been in training before and plan to attend a new school, you must obtain a supplemental certificate of eligibility in advance from the VA regional office. This also is required if you are going back to a school this fall, but have attended a different school during the summer.
4. At the time you enroll, file an estimate of earnings so that the VA can compute the amount of your subsistence. At most colleges, be prepared to cover personal expenses for six or seven weeks, as the first subsistence checks are expected to go out about November 10.
5. If you have been notified of an overpayment on previous subsistence, make arrangements at the nearest VA office to pay it back in a manner convenient to you. Failure to do so will suspend further educational benefits.
6. If you are coming from outside Oregon, or if you have been in school in another state, be sure that the VA office now holding your records has been requested to transfer your file to the Oregon regional office.

7. All disabled veterans desiring training under Public Law 16 (vocational act) should report to a VA training office before registering.
8. Advise the VA promptly on changes in address, training, and dependents. Subsistence will be paid at the $75-a-month rate, unless the VA has received proof of dependents. An ex-GI with one dependent is eligible for $105, and those with two or more may draw $120.
9. Apply early for enrollment at your chosen school. Oregon colleges will be as crowded as last year, despite an expected decline in veteran students.

An Appeal for Wholehearted Co-operation In Observing the City's Sanitary Regulations

The Mayor and City Council of Heppner are appealing to the citizens of the community to abolish all smudge burning and burning in disposal cans within the city limits. These practices cause objectionable odors, and extreme discomforts, and are especially displeasing to people afflicted with bronchial disorders. Furthermore, these practices are against the Ordinance of Safety and in the future will not be permitted except with a special permit from the City Fire Marshal.

We further appeal to the people of Heppner to abide by the sanitary regulations. All Garbage cans should be covered. The city now has a garbage disposal truck and on regular pickups will take away all grass clippings, garden trash and other rubbish if it is in containers that can be handled. Steel barrels and oil barrels filled with garbage make for too heavy lifting for the man collecting the garbage.

We are aware that there are other conditions in Heppner that are in violation of sanitary regulations. The pollution of Willow creek is a danger to everyone's health, and especially dangerous to children playing in these polluted waters. The Council does not wish to take action on stream pollution at this time as it is felt the sewer bond election in November will carry. But if it does not pass, the sewer pipes running into Willow creek will be plugged.

For the safety of the health of all, let us cooperate in every possible way to make this a clean and sanitary city.
