Back-to-School

Time Means More Caution by Drivers

Back-to-school time is extra caution time for motorists. Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry is reminding drivers as children in all sections of the state return to classrooms this week.

Newbry pointed out that 536 children were struck down by automobiles last year, representing one-third of all pedestrian casualties. He declared that a little more driver alertness in each case would have prevented most of the accidents and minimized the others.

"This is a good time to check brakes," the secretary suggested. "When a child darts out into the street unexpectedly, a quick stop may be the difference between life and death."

He urged motorists to observe speed limits at school crossings and be especially alert wherever children are playing near the street.
