Sale of High Grade Herefords Scheduled At Salem Monday

Another of the purebred livestock auction sales for which Salem is rapidly becoming noted is the private offering of Bonelli, Ward and Cook Polled Hereford cattle to be held at the state fairgrounds on Monday, September 27. Seven bulls, 44 bred heifers and three open heifers are included, according to R. A. Ward of Halsey, who was in Salem this week making final arrangements for the event. Bonelli Cattle company of Sausalito, Cal., has consigned 32 animals featuring the get of the $30,000 bull Trumode Domino 6th Ralph Cook of Medford will offer seven bulls and heifers. Ward is to enter 15. Polled Herefords are naturally hornless, a feature popular with fat stock buyers due to the freedom from bruises often caused in shipping horned cattle. Cowboys also claim the lack of horns makes for ease of handling, the danger of being pronged by sharp horns being eliminated. According to the laws of heredity horns are recessive, that is, polled cattle never have horns, but horned cattle occasionally are parents to mutants or "sports" which are hornless. The Polled Hereford breed originated in 1801 due to the enterprise of Warren Gammon of Des Moines, Iowa, who sent out inquiries for cattle lacking horns to 2500 Hereford cattle breeders in U. S. He located six polled bulls and 10 polled cows. Of these he purchased all the bulls and seven of the cows. From this foundation the breed developed, an association was formed in 1807 which during last year recorded more than 27,000 animals. An auction of 55 Bonelli Polled Herefords at Corvallis last March averaged $433 with a top female at $1080. Cattle for his sale will be on display at the state fairgrounds all day Sunday before the sale. Catalogues may be had by writing to R. A. Ward, Halsey, Oregon. in contrast with 51 in the same period last year for a decline of 22 percent. More than half the pedestrian fatalities, 23 out of 40, were under 15 or over 65 years of age, Newby pointed out. He said crossing streets between intersections was the leading factor in bringing death to walkers. Railroad crossing mishaps led in the fatality increases, with 14 losing their lives as compared with only six last year. This figure already exceeds the complete grade crossing toll for 1947, the secretary noted.

Accident Record Up, Death Rate Down In Traffic

Recently completed tabulations of Oregon's traffic accident record for the first six months of 1948 reveal that accidents and injuries increased nearly three percent over the same period last year, but deaths declined almost 10 percent, Secretary of State Earl T. Newby has announced. He added that additional reports of deaths through the month of August improves the fatality decrease to 14 percent from the figure for last year. Throughout the year, travel has remained approximately 10 percent higher than 1947, he said. Greatest decline in any accident classification was in pedestrian deaths. Forty were killed
