Time to Save Electricity!

4:30 to 6:30 every workday afternoon

Here's how you can help guard against a breakdown in electric service: use as little electricity as possible between 4:30 and 6:30 on workday afternoons. All power systems are overloaded then, for lights come on everywhere these early winter afternoons, while stores and factories are still operating. The situation will be critical until big new power plants can be built to supply this rapidly growing Northwest. In the meantime please save electricity every way you can from 4:30 to 6:30 in the afternoon.
