Order Placed For V.F.W. Sponsored Public Ambulance

Group Hopes For Delivery Within 60 to 90 Days

The committee in charge of the fund drive for the Veterans of Foreign Wars placed an order early this week for a Superior Cadillac ambulance which, when it comes, will be placed at the disposal of the people of the county as an emergency car. Delivery is expected in from 60 to 90 days and will be received by the VFW at a point in Ohio and driven to Hepner.

The car ordered will come fully equipped to meet all kinds of emergencies and will be large enough to handle four persons, in case of a car wreck or some other accident where several persons might be injured. It will contain a cabinet with about everything needed for first aid service, enough of everything to handle calls requiring up to two hours of duty.

Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars are preparing to take lessons in first aid and it has also been suggested that courses in ambulance driving will be in order.

Dr. A. D. McMurdy, chairman, today submitted a list of names of donors to the fund up to the present. These include: Frank Wilkinson, Fred Mankin, Mankin & Bush, Turn-A-Lum Lumber Co., Miss Lulu M. Hager, Mary Van's Flower Shop, Elkhorn Restaurant, Heppner Cleaners, Frank M. Adkins, Joe Snyder, Howard Keithley, Turner & Van Marder, Heppner Garage, James Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Duvall, Al Troedson, Next O'Harra, George N. Peck, Alex Hunt, Terrell Benge, Harold Erwin, Gordon McCough, Wightman Bros., Heppner Market, Walter Luckman, John Blatt, Central Market & Grocery, Homer Hughes, Case Furniture Co.

"We want to express our appreciation to the people who have so willingly responded to the good cause of getting an ambulance for the good people of Morrow county," Dr. McMurdy said. "There have been no turn downs but a few postponements until after the income tax is settled. There you are, government interfering with private business again."

Two more homemakers join the ranks of the new 4-H club leaders this week. Mrs. Garland Swanson of Ione is leading the newly organized home wood-working 4-H club at Ione. This young club will meet for their work in the school manual training room to learn the use and care of common tools, and to make their five required articles. There should be many good looking, well-made, serviceable articles come from the hands of the following club members: Paul Wentworth, Larry Rietmann, Penny Swanson, Dick Eckstrom, Garry Brenner, John Mason, Sam Barnett, Wayne Gollyhorn, Alvin McCabe, Clyde Ritchie, Ernest Drake.

The other club leader is Mrs. Oscar Breeding of Lexington who is starting the breakfast club for future homemakers. This will be a fresh start for Lexington did not have a 4-H club last year. The five enrollees for this cooking club are Joan Breeding, Yvonne Breeding, Eileen Breeding, Patricia Steagall and Deanna Steagall.

These new clubs need much encouragement and obvious interest. The parents and friends of these members of 4-H club work are invited to attend any of the club meetings. Two clubs still in the embryo stage are at Irtigan and Ione. Parents, let's help give them birth.

Random Thoughts...

This week, January 16-22, is being observed by printers throughout the land as "Printing Week." Special emphasis is being placed upon the fact that Benjamin Franklin's birthday occurs during the week, the inference being that the industry has come a long way since the "patron saint of printing" put his Poor Richard's Almanac into circulation.

The writer was somewhat surprised to learn that the industry has grown to such great proportions. Look where it ranks in Oregon: Third in number of manufacturing establishments; fourth in number of employees; fifth in annual payrolls (over $15,000,000).

In the nation (1939 census) printing, exclusive of publishing, ranks first in number of salaried employees; first in amount of salaries paid; second in number of establishments.

"One printing plant for every 3000 of our population. One in 75 business establishments in United States is a printing plant. For every 220 United States population, one is an employe of the printing industry.

Printing is better than a 4 billion dollar industry in its own right... Closely allied with it is the 2 billion dollar paper industry. Together they are the sparkplug of the nation's economy, producing goods and services estimated at 165 billion dollars at 1942 price levels."

It is a far cry from the old handset days to the modern printing establishment. The time has long since passed when a printer with a hatful of type and a small foot-power press could come along and set up a print shop for a few hundred dollars. Printing equipment nowadays runs into real money and hand composition as known in days past is rapidly becoming a lost art. The larger volume of composition required calls for machinery and the average linotype operator will put up about six lines of type to one by a hand compositor. Automatic job presses are gradually replacing, or supplementing, the hand fed presses.

This type of machine, designed to turn out a bigger volume of work, also runs into what is frequently referred to as "big dough," but as time goes on more and more of the smaller shops throughout the land will go in for faster service and larger volume. It is the trend of the times in the business world and the printer must keep abreast of the general progress.

It would be a valuable contribution to the thought of the world if E. G. Harlan would put into pamphlet form that section of his speech delivered here Wednesday evening relative to the lack of understanding existing between the people of America and the peoples of Russia, Germany and France. Briefly, he discussed through contact with people of high standing in the aforementioned European countries that everything done in those war-stricken lands is either directly in preparation for a future war or having a bearing upon defense against an aggressor. It is not to the credit of the United States that we have fought two world wars and still don't understand why we are now fighting a cold war with the prospect none too bright for keeping us out of a third shooting war. We believe a general circulation of Mr. Harlan's viewpoint would lend a certain amount of information of value to the public that appears to be lacking, particularly in America. The Russians would not believe anything issuing from America that did not agree with their beliefs, and it is just as well that more of our people understand why this is the case.

MISS HEALY TO WED
Mr. and Mrs. John Healy announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Rosetta Joan, to Albert Ted Palmateer of Ione. The wedding will take place at 2 o'clock p.m., Saturday, February 5, at the St. Patrick's Catholic church in Heppner. An invitation has been extended to all relatives and friends. Mr. Palmateer is the son of Mrs. Echo Palmateer of Ione.

PAYS $100 FINE
James Patrick McNamee paid a fine of $100 and $450 costs in the court of Justice J. O. Hager Monday morning on a charge of giving alcoholic beverage to a minor. McNamee signed a written statement of his conduct to Officer Gordon Grady.

Mrs. Ida Grimes left Tuesday morning for Portland where she will visit for some time at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Leathers. Her daughter, Mrs. Allen Case, drove her to Arlington to catch a bus to the city.

Cooperation Of Public Sought In Conserving Power

More Curtailment Advised to Ward Off Breakdown

An emergency 15 to 20 per cent cut in use of electricity to help conserve the dwindling supply resulting from reduced river flow is being requested of all power users throughout the Pacific Northwest, effective to once, according to J. R. Huffman, local manager for Pacific Power & Light company.

He appealed to all customers of the company to join immediately in the concerted power-saving drive, which is being carried on by all power agencies, public, private and federal, serving the whole shortage area.

The saving is vitally needed, he declared, to carry the rigour through the present critical shortage period without danger to essential services or threat to industrial employment.

Savings must continue to be made over the peak use period each evening and in addition must be extended wherever possible during other hours of the day or night to reach the necessary over-all cut from normal use.

The new conservation drive became necessary because the continued cold wave blanketing the Columbia river valley is making the power situation steadily worse. Water to turn the generators at the region's hydro plants is falling to dangerously low levels, while the sub-freezing weather is keeping power loads high, explained Huffman.

Critical nature of the power situation is shown by the fact that the Northwest Power Pool, which interconnects all parts of the Pacific Northwest, has lost 300,000 kilowatts of continuous generating capacity because of the low water and ice conditions. This is more than 15 per cent of the average power load carried by the pool.

It was emphasized that the savings must be made through the entire region and by every customer to meet the emergency.

Legion Sponsoring Junior Set Party

Heppner post, American Legion is sponsoring a St. Valentine's party for the high school young people on the evening of Saturday, February 12. It is being designated as a "Sweetheart ball" and will be a formal affair.

A feature of the party will be the music. This will be provided by the "Blue Dreamers," an all-girl orchestra composed of high school and more recently graduated girls.

Glenn Jacobs of Enterprise was a Heppner visitor Wednesday. He reported that the temperature had been hovering around 10 below zero up there, with snow to the depth of two feet in the valley. In the northwest part of the county, Powatka ridge is credited with drifts to the depth of 25 feet, making travel conditions extremely difficult.

Louis Lyons of the Heppner Photo Studio was a visitor in Monument today where he hoped to get some good pictures of the new gymnasium, particularly the interior. He accompanied one of the Broadfoot trucks which was hauling some lumber over from the mill here to be used in completing the plant at Monument.

Needs of Airport Cited at Lexington Meeting Monday

Several Phases of Airport Building Portrayed to Small Company of Interested Citizens Monday Evening at the Auditorium in the Lexington School

A film from the state board of aeronautics was shown by William C. Hill, airport engineer for the board, an dal Froman, consultant for the board.

Beginning with the decision of a medium sized city to build an airport, the film carried through the steps taken to obtain federal aid, the federal agency's assistance in obtaining the proper site, the drawing of plans, the actual construction, and the eventual dedication of the port.

Following the showing of the film, Hill and Froman answered questions relative to financing, most of which was known by those more closely connected with the Lexington airport but which it was felt should be made more specific for the benefit of others less well informed.

It was found that the fund to be raised could be divided over a three-year period, with the federal agency matching on a 56-44 basis. However, the SBA officials counseled against this to some extent and urged that the port officials try to raise the full amount in one drive.

It was finally decided to call a meeting of the directors and formulate a plan for gathering in the money—all of it at this time, if possible, or as much as can be obtained.

The directors, or committee, are Mayor Conley Lanham and Frank W. Turner, Heppner; Clifford Yarnell and Archie Munkers, Lexington, and Milton Morgan and Kenneth Smouse, Ione.

Home Made Radio Broadcasting Set Enjoyed at Kinzua

Kinzua people have been entertained the past week by home talent on the radio. The Hugh Sampson family have built a broadcasting set, and have perfected it so their music and songs can be heard in Kinzua. Bonds Sale Exceeds Redemption In '48 Chairman Reports

Total sales in Oregon for December were $3,711,382, according to County Savings Bond Chairman Mrs. Elaine George. Redemptions exceeded sales for large periods of the year, but for December this excess was a comparatively small amount of $158,195. The Treasury Department report quoted by the county chairman indicated that redemptions in Oregon exceeded sales for the year 1948 by $3,720,692.

The Treasury Department figures are a good indication of the fact that for many people and a good many businesses in the state, 1948 was a much different year than 1947. The cold and late spring of 1948 climaxed by the Columbia River flood, followed in turn by a three months' longshore strike and this in turn succeeded by a very marked slow-down in the lumber market, all tended to decrease Savings Bonds sales in Oregon and to increase the cashing of bonds. However, the county chairman in her statement pointed out the fact that actually the holdings of these bonds by individuals in Oregon total more at the end of 1948 than ever before because the accrued interest coming to Oregon citizens on the ownership of one-half a billion dollars worth of savings bonds more than made up for the excess of redemptions over sales.

Mrs. George further pointed out that the sales picture in Oregon is in direct contrast to that of the nation at large. The treasury sold in 1948 approximately 7 and 1/4 billion dollars of savings bonds, with sales exceeding redemptions by about 2 billion 151 million dollars.

New Chevrolet To Be Shown Saturday

The Hodge Chevrolet building at the corner of Main and May in Heppner will be the focal point for the new-car minded folk of the county Saturday, January 22, for on that day the brand spanking new 1949 Chevrolet will be on display. The display room is being all "dolled up" in preparation for the event, says Charles Hodge, who returned the first of the week from San Francisco where he with other dealers of the coast states previewed the new model the past week.

Hodge returned with a lot of enthusiasm for the new model, which he says is just about a new car throughout. It is the product of three years of engineering research and design development. Begun immediately after V-J day, experimental work has included 1,068,000 miles of test driving over the roads of the General Motors proving ground and arid highways of the southwest.

Hodge said that dealers, like prospective buyers, have been held in suspense regarding the new Chevrolet and that the dealers at the preview weren't disap-

County Volunteers Aim at Reaching Dimes March Quota

Determination of Morrow county volunteers to make the current March of Dimes an unprecedented success was increased today with receipt for figures showing that five polio cases were reported in Oregon last week.

Dr. E. T. Hedlund, 1949 Oregon March of Dimes chairman, informed Charles A. Ruggles, head of the campaign in this county, that all five patients are being treated in Portland hospitals with local chapters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis financing care.

Two of the victims were sisters from route 3, Corvallis, and the others were young boys, one from Mill City, another from Salem and the third from Seaside. There were no cases of polio reported in Oregon the first week in January. It was the first time since July that the state had been without at least one new case a week, and the brief lapse gave premature rise to hopes that northwestern Oregon's alarming incidence of cold-weather infantile paralysis was on the wane.

"It is too early in the year to tell whether last week's outcropping means that 1949 will be a severe polio year in Oregon, a state board of health official advised Dr. Hedlund today.

The official, Dr. G. D. Carlyle Thompson, state director of preventive medicine, pointed out, though, that "our polio season certainly fell off slowly this winter." Dr. Thompson recalled that last January was unusual, too, there being more than a dozen new cases reported in the state during the month. He observed that incidence in Oregon counties in the ensuing months made the year the fourth worst in Oregon history from the polio standpoint. Two hundred twenty cases, in all, were reported in 1948.

Council Frowns On Putting Curfew Law Into Effect

Ordinance Will Be Held in Abeyance For Further Study

Proposal to invoke the curfew ordinance which has lain dormant on the city statute books for a number of years did not meet with full approval of the council at the mid-month meeting Monday evening. The proposal was made with a view to putting a check on some of the reported nocturnal practices of the town's younger set and while most of the city dads conceded that some corrective measures should be taken they did not give their approval to putting it into operation at this time.

Instead, they suggested that it be held in abeyance pending further study of the youth problem with the hope that the "kids" will take it upon themselves to head for home a little earlier.

The council listened to the first two readings of the proposed curfew ordinance, which sets up the method of collecting the funds for financing the project. Bonding companies interested in possible purchase of the bonds must have specific information relative to the city's financing plans before approval can be obtained to invest.

This information can be given as soon as the ordinance is passed and the council will now move to obtain passage.

Leaks in the water system, due to the unusual weather, have kept the city work crew busy the past week or two. Pressure became so low last week end that it was necessary for the city to obtain water from the county reservoir. A break in a connection where the new transite pipe line crosses Hinton creek was the chief cause of the loss of pressure. There have been breaks in other sections and one on North Court street necessitated shutting off the pressure on that line while the crew was making repairs. School was dismissed because of the lack of water.

Large Crowd Turns Out For Chamber of Commerce Dinner

Weather Compels Change of Plans At Last Moment

A crowd estimated at 110 persons gathered at the Elkhorn restaurant in Heppner Wednesday evening to participate in the annual dinner of the Heppner chamber of commerce and to hear the guest speaker, E. G. Harlan, president of the chamber of commerce at the Dalles.

Due to frozen water pipes at the American Legion hall, it was necessary to make a change of plans at the last minute and Mrs. Velma Huebner, proprietor of the Elkhorn restaurant, graciously consented to turn over her eatery to the chamber of commerce for the evening. This change likewise caused some cancellation of program numbers, all musical, because there wasn't time to move a piano to the restaurant.

Judge J. G. Barratt was master of ceremonies and kept the interest at a high pitch. Guests from Ione and Lexington, and one from Moro were introduced. These included Mr. and Mrs. E. Markham Baker, Ione; Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Yarnell and Mr. and Mrs. Orville Cutsforth, Lexington, and Vernon Platt, Moro.

Following guest introductions, the emcee introduced Mrs. J. Palmer Sorlien who read two numbers, "Strap By the Door" and "The Club Supper."

Frank W. Turner as a past president of the organization, was accorded the honor of installing the officers chosen by the board of directors. These included O. G. Crawford, president; Louis Lyons, secretary, and Merle Bekett, treasurer. Orville Smith, vice president, was unable to be present, but Turner declared him "in."

Following the installation the new president read his selection of committee chairmen for the year, as follows: Orville Smith, roads and highways; Frank W. Turner, membership; John Sagar, civic improvement; Judge J. G. Barratt, publicity; Henry Tetz, education; Glenn Parsons, recreation; Floyd Tolleson, transportation; C. J. D. Bauman, legislation; Dr. L. D. Tibbles, housing; J. J. O'Connor, projects, and Allen Case, merchants committee.

The assemblage was then favored with three songs by Sandra Davidson of the second grade at Lexington, who sang strictly solo, inasmuch as there was no accompanying instrument—and with her true pitch she needs no accompaniment. Chairman Barratt stood her on the table and with her teacher, Mrs. Sorlien, giving her the pitch she went through her three numbers like a veteran performer.

In introducing the speaker of the evening, Judge Barratt recalled that back in 1914-16 he and Kenneth Binns, who later was editor of the sports page of a Tacoma newspaper, used to fold papers for the Heppner Herald every press day. Mr. Harlan was editor of the Herald and his brother, Leslie K. Harlan, was publisher.

Mr. Harlan's subject, had he titled his speech, could well have been "Know one another." He pointed to the fact that individuals and communities are unable to work together unless they get acquainted and learn each others needs and desires. As an example, he told of the time Klamath Falls was split over the courthouse issue. The town was divided into several factions, but mainly those who lived north of a certain street and those on the south side. During that period a young clothing merchant visited the town and decided it would be a good place to set up in business. He rented a roomy space on a prominent corner and began moving in his goods. A delegation from the north side of the line called upon him and invited him to join with them inasmuch as his place of business was in their territory. A sign painter came in during this visitation and when the delegation had left took up the matter of painting a sign over his doorway. The merchant was non-plussed over this strange state of affairs, a town divided against itself, and felt he wanted to be a friend to everybody, something he realized he could not be if he joined with any faction. He felt he should have a slogan that would indicate to all passersby that he was a citizen of Klamath Falls and asked the painter if he had anything in mind that would meet the problem. The painter replied that if he were doing it he would say, "I ain't mad at nobody." Mr. Sugarman, for it was K. Sugarman, ordered the sign painted and it became one of the most famous business slogans in all the land. Not alone did it become famous for its quaint construction, but it led the actions to consider the light in which they had placed their com-

REALLY SEEING SOUTH

Bert Scouten telephoned the local REA office a few days back from Florida to report on "the state of the nation" down that way so far as the Scouten family vacation is concerned. He stated that he had been to Havana, Cuba and other points of interest and he and the family are having a grand time. He also stated that his stomach condition is somewhat improved and he is beginning to feel more like himself.

The showing in Heppner will run concurrently with the showing all over the country and the Hodge Chevrolet will be open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. for the convenience of the public.

"All of the changes of seven years will be found in this new model," Mr. Hodge said, "and I'm telling you it maintains the Chevrolet tradition of rugged, reliable transportation at the lowest possible cost."
