Griffith-Kelsay Nuptials Event of Sunday Morning

By DELPHA JONES

The Glenn Griffith home was the scene at 9 a. m. Sunday of an informal wedding when Miss Faye Elsie Griffith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Griffith, became the bride of Robert Kelsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kelsay of Spray. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Glenn Griffith. Incidental recordings were played preceding the ceremony, after which the bride entered to the tune of the Lohengrin wedding march. She was lovely in a white rayon and embroidered eyelet street length dress with a corsage of peach colored roses. The best man was Bill Kelsay, brother of the groom. The ceremony was single ring, with Rev. Frank Z. Cantrell officiating. After the ceremony a reception was held in the dining room of the Griffith home with bride and groom cutting the first piece of the bride's cake, after which Mrs. Glenn Griffith continued assisted by Mrs. W. H. I. Padberg. The cake was a beautiful creation of three tiers, with a bride and groom at the top under an arch of orange blossoms. The table was covered with a lovely lace table cloth and pastel colored napkins. For going away the bride wore a champagne colored suit with same accessories and wore a white corsage. After a trip to the Ochoco mountains they will be at home in Spray. In charge of the guest book was Miss Glenna Griffith, daughter of the Glenn Griffiths. Those attending the wedding other than the family were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Padberg, grandparents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. I. The rooms were decorated with pastel colored gladiolus in white baskets as well as several bouquets of seasonal flowers.
