infestation, the agronomist concluded. M. M. Oveson, Pendleton, superintendent of the Pendleton experiment station and project supervisor of the league sponsored Columbia Basin Soil Erosion Project, stated that as the project starts its second year, three demonstration farms are in operation. It is too early, he stated, to announce trial results.

A record 4000,000 acres of wheat may be sprayed to control weeds using 2,4-D in the Columbia basin during the current crop year. Virgil Freed, Oregon State College experiment station agronomist, told league members. During this past year, he said, only 2000,000 acres were sprayed.

He urged wheat ranchers to use water as a carrier for their 2,4-D sprays in place of oil carriers, oil carriers Freed explained, will cut wheat yields from two to five bushels per acre. This will more than offset the added cost of spraying with water as a carrier. The weed chemical 2,4-D saves Columbia basin wheat farmers an estimated three to four million dollars a year. Goodall around farming practices however are still the best defence against weeds, Freed stated.

How America's first service station was born

One day back in 1907, a Standard of California man stood watching a line of impatient motorists in goggles and linen dusters waiting to buy five-gallon cans of gasoline at Standard's Seattle plant. He had an idea for serving customers more efficiently, more conveniently.

improved products they sell... would probably make them hard to recognize by the men who developed the first station. For the people of Standard today, as then, continue to seek ways to make better products—and to serve better the people who use them.

The next day a thirty-gallon tank which had been a kitchen water heater was installed opposite the main gate at the plant. To it were attached a valve-controlled hose and a glass gauge... so gas could be poured directly into the customers' cars.

That makeshift arrangement was the first service station in America.

Today there are more than 10,000 Company and Independent Dealer stations selling Standard of California products. The services and conveniences they offer... the

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Now Hospitals Are "Banks," Too!

Doc Simpson was saying, "Hospitals are building up 'bone banks' that work just like blood banks. When bone is needed, the surgeon takes one from a refrigerator, cuts it to the right shape and simply splices it in."

"You doctors are sure making progress," I says, "but tell me, are any of the patients fussy about whose bone they're getting?"

"No sir!" replies Doc. "No more than they worry about whose blood they get. No one yet asked for a bone from a man who went to the same school or church he did."

From where I sit, it would be a better world if we were half as willing to accept other people's ideas and tastes, as we seem to be willing to accept their bone and blood. There'll always be differences. Some like buttermilk, others would rather have a sparkling glass of temperate beer. But underneath we're pretty much the same—deserving each other's respect and tolerance!

"These investments show faith in the future."

NEW POWER POLES, felled and treated in the Northwest, are among the many items in PPL's big construction budget. More than 6,000 poles, varying in length from 30 to 70 feet, have been set in the ground this year. They play an important part in the big job of serving this fast-growing region with PPL's low-cost electricity.

Cost of new construction by Pacific Power & Light since V-J day will total more than $25,000,000. These are development dollars. They are taxpaying, job-making dollars, invested here in the Northwest to help meet your electrical needs.

Power requirements of this fast-growing Pacific Northwest demand a steady flow of these development dollars. That is why all of us want investors to look on this region as a land of opportunity, and of fair reward.

The investor whose dollars help extend and improve your low-cost electric service, while sharing your tax burden, is truly a Partner in Progress!
