LOST BOUNDARIES

Touching, always tender story of colored people "passing" for white, by W. L. White, in Reader's Digest, has been produced into a movie by Louis DeRoachemont of March of Time fame. The film's realism is enhanced by being photographed on actual New England locations and capable players. This is a true story.

Those "twintillating" basketeers—the brilliant Cudjoe twins from Oklahoma way—will have the fans seeing double when they pace the speedy Kansas City Stars basketball aggregation against the Heppiner Shamrocks on the Heppiner school gymnasium floor at 3 p. m. Sunday, January 15.

The Kansas City quintet is associated with the great Harlem Globetrotters and the Cudjoes have been "lend-leased" to it both to keynote a splendid floor game and also with an eye on the gate. In the past two seasons they have proved terrific drawing cards, but they've also established themselves as topflight players.

This is all the more remarkable considering the fact that the boys, who are identical mirror-image twins, stand only five feet five inches in height and weigh a mere 135 each. They've proven their ability to stand against the big men and as floor men, basket shooters and showmen, they're strictly of Harlem Globetrotter qual-
