most infantile paralysis cases in history, according to Dr. Hedlund who predicted that the final figure for the year would approximate 50,000.

Infantile Paralysis Control Measures To Require More Funds

The third heaviest polio onslaught in Oregon's history hit the state in 1949, afflicting some 325 residents and leaving virtually every chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis with funds depleted.

This was reported Jan. 5 by Dr. E. T. Hedlund of Portland, state chairman of the 1950 March of Dimes which opened on January 16 and will run through January 31. Dr. Samuel Osgood, state epidemiologist, advised Dr. Hedlund that the 325-case total for the year was an estimate, but even so it was one of the worst 12-month periods in Oregon's polio annals.

Dr. Osgood said there were only two more severe polio years—1927 with 390 cases and 1943 with 415 cases. Nationally, 1949 brought the most infantile paralysis cases in history, according to Dr. Hedlund who predicted that the final figure for the year would approximate 50,000.

"The eventual cost of treating our 325 cases of the year just passed will climb to about a half million dollars", Dr. Hedlund predicted. On the same basis of computation, he said, the nation's load for caring for the new cases last year will run between $60,000,000 and $90,000,000.

He revealed that the epidemic emergency fund of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis "had been under heavy pressure all year and was now reduced to almost its last cent". Twenty million dollars had been dispersed to local chapters from this source, in addition to the many millions of dollars which these chapters spent from their own treasuries.

Dr. Hedlund said that practically all Oregon chapters were scraping the bottom of the barrel.

He disclosed that Cook, Marion and Malheur counties had just applied for advances bringing to seven the number of Oregon chapters which had asked such aid of the national organization in 1949.

transferred $3,000,000 from the undivided profits account to the surplus account, making the surplus $15,500,000. With capital of $4,500,000 this gives total capital and surplus of $20,000,000. In addition to these capital funds, the undivided profits account is $13,042,322.69, or a total capital fund of $33,042,322.69.

"Although the earnings of The First National Bank were greater in 1949 than in 1948," he looked forward with confidence and enthusiasm to 1950, with every reason to believe that earnings can be maintained at a high level," Belgrano concluded.

The Oregon pedestrian most likely to be struck and killed in traffic is 59 years of age or older, records in the Secretary of State's traffic safety division reveal.

Statewide accident figures show two out of three pedestrian victims are under 15 or over 59 with the older group making up the largest share of the toll. The most deadly time of day for all persons on foot is between 5 and 6 p. m. during the evening rush hour.

Wet or icy streets and the early darkness of the winter season greatly increase the hazards to elderly persons, the division emphasized, pointing out that the older a person is the more slowly he walks and the more likely he is to fall in the path of an approaching car. Walkers were reminded that slippery road surfaces may make it impossible for a motorist to stop even though the pedestrian is seen.

The records show that crossing streets between intersections, or "jaywalking", and walking along the right hand side of a highway account for a major portion of Oregon's pedestrian deaths each year.

Interstate Meeting Scheduled To Talk Antelope Affairs

The second annual interstate antelope meeting, attended by representatives of Oregon, Idaho, California, and Nevada game commissions, will be held Jan. 24 at Hunter's Inn in Lakeview, announced Robert Mace, Chief of Big Game for the State Game Commission. Representatives of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service will also be present.

The game agents will compare antelope census figures, hear composition data, and kill figures for all four states. Mace pointed out that antelope do not recognize state lines in their movements. Antelope in Oregon frequently move into Idaho, Nevada and Northeastern California. It is essential to assemble information from all four states if the antelope are to be properly managed, continued Mace.

Representatives for Oregon State Game Commission are William Lightfoot, Paul Bonn, Ellis Mason, Cecil Langdon, and Robert Mace.

Laborers Headed List Of Income Tax Payers In Earlier Days

In the early days of the Oregon income tax, laborers filing returns represented the larger number of taxpayers, followed closely by the office workers, says Ray Smith, in charge of the income division of the state tax commission.

Laborers made 3617 returns with a total net income of $5,694,780 and they paid a tax of $1,432. The banking group filed 258 personal reports and their net income was $1,805,160, on which the tax was $16,088. The state produced 518 farmers, making net income of $2,120,280 with taxes of $10,672. Physicians and surgeons filed 594 reports with a net income of $3,979,580 and were taxed $37,100. Lawyers to the number of 615 had a net income of $3,745,280, with a tax of $33,679. Lumber and timbermen filed 1966 reports showing a net income of $7,315,690 and were taxed $74,732. That first record disclosed 23 newspaper reporters had a net income of $53,190 and their tax was $148. There were 273 publishers, with a combined net income of $1,015,540 for the group and their tax was $8529.

Since the first report on the classification of income taxpayers the information has been held confidential. There were 43,845 filings when the law was instituted. It is expected that the returns on the 1949 income will approximate 500,000 filings by next April 15, the deadline for making the reports.
