Farmers Still In Cheerful Mood On Crop Conditions

Moisture Content Plentiful; More Sunshine Needed

Farmers are not downhearted as yet over the lateness of spring but if Old Sol continues behind the curtain of cloud that has hung over the area most of the time they may begin to the time they may begin to show signs of worry. Reports from different sections show that moisture is plentiful so far, and with a normal amount of sunshine there should be good yields of grain and hay. Frosty nights have slowed the growth of grain crops and likewise have held the grass back, but this condition can be quickly over-come by warmer weather, farmers and stockmen point out.

Minor losses in calf and lamb crops have been experienced, due largely to the chilly weather. All in all, stock wintered well weather and everything will be well with us," say the ranchers With the thermometer moving upward into the 60's on Tuesday, it looked like spring had arrived, and agriculture and business activities sprang to life almost in stantly. Wednesday found a northeast wind in control of the situation and by 4:30 this morning rain changed to snow and the countryside was white and the country side was a founder of the country side was a founder of the count ing rain changed to snow and the countryside was white when the community came to life. Several hours of gentle sunshine have removed the blanket and all nature once more breathes a song of spring.

"Happy Easter"

We again greet you with a prayer, a wish, a hope, with a touch of the love that is God with us; to say "Happy Easter," joy to everyone.

Easter comes laden with the memories of things that are past but still live on. Those memories conv. with vivid and glorious assurance of things that are true, and that are.

Our Lord's days are beacons that shine on with marvelous brilliance, reminding us to stop a moment and consider, and say a little prayer, and go our way rejoicing.
