AMERICA'S JOB OF THE HOUR

A message from General George C. Marshall,
Secretary of Defense

High morale is the great necessity of an army. In maintaining the morale of the American Army, the Red Cross must play an important part.

As our armed forces are increased in numbers, the work of the Red Cross for servicemen and their families and for hospitalized veterans must be correspondingly increased. And in addition we are now called on to coordinate the procurement of blood for all the armed services.

Just as our fighting men have joined with those of many nations to prevent aggression and strive for lasting security and peace, so we, from all sections, all groups and all faiths, must join together in the defense of the ideals and the humanities that mean freedom to us.

Mobilization of civilians for defense is now under way. The Red Cross has been called on to recruit and train 250,000 volunteer nurse's aides; hundreds of thousands of housewives in home nursing, and 20,000,000 men and women in first aid. These are large numbers. They involve a tremendous organized effort in which every one of us must play a part. And in addition, plans for emergency mass feeding, shelter and clothing are being worked out with local civil defense authorities.

These new responsibilities have been accepted by the Red Cross as a necessary obligation, a duty. This is a time for positive action. When you are asked to take part and to contribute, I feel sure you will do so generously, for our country needs the Red Cross, and the Red Cross requires our support.

Mobilize for defense give now!
