TIMBER SALE FREEZE REVOKED

The stop order for sales of national forest timber has been revoked and the Portland regional Forest Service office has been authorized to proceed with timber sale advertisements, according to H. J. Andrews, regional forester. All future sales will be subject to the provisions of the Economic Stabilization Agency general ceiling price regulation issued on January 26, 1951.

The price freezing order provides that the highest stumpage rate for each species and product which was in effect in a going sale during the base period from December 19, 1950 to January 25, 1951 as set up in the order becomes the ceiling price for that species and product.

In view of the many high bids received during the past several years on sales which are not yet cut out, this provision of the price freeze order results in exceptionally high ceilings for most species. The ceiling for west side Douglas-fir sawlogs is $63.00 per thousand, for ponderosa pine sawlogs $52.30 per thousand, and for hemlock sawlogs $21.50 per thousand. Andrews believes that these rates will be ineffective in most sales, because even under competitive bidding, stumpage bids equal to these ceiling prices will probably rarely be offered.

No authority exists at present to establish price ceilings except as provided for in the regulation. As soon as possible the Forest Service plans to submit a proposal to the Economic Stabilization Agency for a more effective arrangement of establishing ceiling prices on national forest stumpage.
