4-H Club Interest Pays Off

This is National 4-H Club week, a period set apart to review the activities and progress of this youth movement that is national in its scope so far as America is concerned, and a movement that without doubt is setting the pattern for better understanding among the youth of the world, for there are in at least forty-three other countries similar organizations wherein the youngsters are "learning to do by doing."

There is today probably no other youth organization that is paying off in good citizenship more than the 4-H Club. And the basic principle, we think, is that the fundamentals of business, the matter of conducting their own affairs, is instilled at a period when the young people are beginning to consider their lifelong careers. That does not mean that all farm boys and girls will choose farm careers although where could they do better by themselves when, after learning the routine of feeding and developing beef animals, hogs, sheep, and dairy stock, and the proper selection and tilling of grains, grasses, and garden products, they could easily go ahead in the more scientific branches of agriculture and become not only successful in the production of their chosen projects but likewise acknowledged authorities.

The remuneration, financially speaking, has been worth the efforts expended by the 4-H Club members, yet that is but part of the program. The main purpose, one is prompted to think, is to learn to do things by doing—to earn merit and credit primarily while enjoying the financial return which naturally follows. The competitive nature of the projects puts the youngsters on their toes and creates a spirit of sportsmanship that many of them might not otherwise experience.

It is well to pause and give some thought to the value of this great youth organization, not alone in what it has done to create an outlet for youthful energy and enthusiasm but in the foundation it has laid for developing leaders in both civic and political circles, and in the example set for the youth of other lands who may gather inspiration from this democratic organization and strive to lay the foundation for freedom of action in their respective countries.

The editorial tile is doffed this week to Ronald Baker of Ione, who is one of four Oregon 4-H Club members chosen to attend the National 4-H Camp in Washington, D. C. Looked at from a purely local angle there would have been no doubt in the minds of the people about who to chose, but this this time.

was a matter of statewide choice by unbiased judges. That makes the choice far more significant, far more important. Ronald has been a busy boy ever since he took on his first project. And it can be said without reservation that he has been one of the most successful in his endeavors. He has developed leadership and poise beyond one of his years and will add the weight of his experience in practical affairs and a good education to make a leading citizen of the future. Morrow county is proud of her 4-H Club boys and girls and happy to have an outstanding youth chosen for this signal honor.

Good Sportsmanship Pays

In athletic competition, about the only glory recognized as such is to win physical laurels. No matter how hard a team may have trained, if it did not win at least a majority of its schedule it suffers loss of face and the coach usually begins casting about for a new job. So fickle is the public that it looks only at the figures on the scoreboard and pays no attention, or at least too little attention, to the type of players making up the teams.

Heppler High school's athletic teams have not come through the past season as champions—that is, cup winners through physical prowess—but the basketball team won an honor at the District 6 basketball tournament last week which should be coveted by all tournament participants. The Mustang squad failed to place in the district percentage column but gained a distinction in some respects more valuable and something that should be sought by all teams—the good conduct award.

Men officiating at the games in which Heppler is playing have on numerous occasions commented on the good behavior of our athletes, declaring it is always a pleasure to work with the boys. That speaks volumes for the boys and their coaches and the atmosphere of good sportsmanship that pervades the school.

The President in his official flying ship took off for Florida for a three weeks vacation from the immediate trials and vicissitudes of life on the Potomac. That seems to be the usual procedure for the chief executive, but we wonder if the investigation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could have had anything to do with his decision to bask in the Florida sunshine just at this time.

A letter from Mary Clark Riggs informs the Gazette Times that her father, M. D. Clark, underwent emergency surgery February 27 at Eugene. Due to his advanced age his family endured some anxious hours until it was learned that he had come through the ordeal in nice shape. He is making a good recovery and will be able to leave the hospital shortly.

Mr. Clark will be 86 this month. He has been making his home with his daughter and family the past few years and has made it a point to visit the old home town at least once a year. His friends will be looking forward to his annual visit again this year.

Those wishing to drop Mr. Clark a line should address him at 2040 Agate, Eugene, Oregon.
