Heart of Central, Southern Oregon Enjoyed on 1000-Mile Motor Trip

The following is a condensation of a motorlog appearing in the July 8 Sunday Oregonian magazine section. It is one of an annual series sponsored jointly by The Oregonian and the Oregon State Motor association.

BY JAMES STUART Staff Writer, The Oregonian

So it's variety you're after in your vacation jaunt; none of this placid contemplation by a cool mountain stream. We've got just the ticket for you—a long 1000-mile ticket, but worth every last cramp you'll feel when you come dragging back to Portland.

Generally, the tour amounts to a loop of central Oregon, touching such scenic and historic spots as Government Camp, Warm Springs, Bend, Burns, Wagonite (that's a fast touch), Valley Falls, Lakeview, Medford, Grants Pass, Roseburg, Eugene and the Willamette valley.

With hard driving you can make it to Lakeview the first day, although this distance (more than 400 miles) is not recommended unless you get an early start.

This leg of the trip is particularly interesting to those who hanker after scenery in varied, overwhelming dosages. Skiway Ride Suggested

First, you are treated to the quiet grandeur of the forest and the west slope of Mt. Hood. Then, if you are in no hurry, take the Skiway trip up Mt. Hood from Government Camp. This side junket takes about an hour, costs a little extra, but rewards those who take it with an unexcelled view of the Cascade valleys.

After the stop at Mt. Hood, it is an easy drive into Bend, home of one of the finest steak houses in the state. Bend makes a good lunch stop. Don't be surprised, though if you eat a bigger lunch than usual here. Might as well, too, for the next stop is Burns, which looks more like the old west than a hundred backgrounds for a Roy Rogers movie.

En route to Burns on highway 20 it's a good idea to stop and fill the gas tank at either Millican Bros. or Hampton. The latter makes an interesting stop, since the only gas station is equipped with a menagerie starring an immense cattle empire. Surrounding Burns are high mountains and endless, arid valleys, majestic in silence and loneliness. Check the gas, oil and tires here, too, for the next stop will be many miles down highway 395 to Wagonite.

After Wagonite, you're on your own so far as the human race is concerned.

Crater lake's serene beauty never grows tiresome.

For more than 60 miles you whiz southward, passing dry Alkali lake and great cliffs that hover ominously above the highway. Through this part of the trip, your speed depends wholly on the condition of your car and your conscience. Some parts of the road stretch 12 miles to the horizon in a straight line.

The road, incidentally, is excellent all the way past Lake Abert, the Abert rim on the eastern shore, Valley Falls and into Lakeview.

The latter city, gateway to the Hart mountain antelope refuge and isolated Warner valley, looks mighty good after a long day on the road. Two or three warnings were, though if you stop at the large and comfortable lodge just north of the city, don't be alarmed when you turn on the hot water. It is quite blunt, the water smells. Specifically, it smells of sulphur.

Glance out your window and you'll soon see why—a geyser near the lodge spurts up and down, supplying the hot water.

When this motorlog was taken in late June, the road around the rim of the lake was not open. Rangers planned, however, to have it ready by July 4.

From Crater Lake you have several alternate routes for the return trip. We took highway 62 into Medford along the Rogue river canyon. You can't make good time on this road, but you won't want to—the scenery is magnificent.

From Medford it's easy driving to Grants Pass, Roseburg and Eugene, a good city to stop for the night. If you have plenty of time, it might be better to stop at Roseburg or even Grants Pass. The haul from Crater Lake via Medford to Eugene is mighty long.

Leaving Eugene at about 9 a. m., you'll be in Portland in plenty of time for lunch—2½ days after you started.

Loop trip through Cascades, central and southern Oregon, Rogue and Willamette valleys.

CARD OF THANKS To those who expressed their sympathy during my recent bereavement. To the nurses at the hospital, and to the Shrine for the use of the hospital bed, I extend my heartfelt thanks. Billie Miller

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Van Winkle of Long Beach, California, visited briefly in Heppner Saturday with her sister, Mrs. Clarence Rosewall. The Van Winkles were enroute to their home from West Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gilliam spent the weekend in Baker with their son, Howard and family. The Heppner Bakery has been undergoing considerable re-arrangement in order to install a Rich-Maid ice cream machine, the only one of its kind in Heppner. The salesroom has been re-decorated with fresh paint and new curtains and counters changed to make more space. The exterior of the building has been newly painted in a soft shade of blue.

Alvin Porterfield was up from The Dalles to spend the weekend with his family. Mr. Porterfield is working in a garage in The Dalles.

Mrs. Adolph Majeske and daughter, Patty, of Lexington were looking after business matters in Heppner Tuesday. Miss Majeske is making preparation to enter nurse's training at Good Samaritan Hospital in Portland early in September.

Roy Gentry of Okanagon, Wn., spent Thursday and Friday here with his aunt, Mrs. Alice Gentry, who is convalescing at her home following her recent serious illness. Her sister, Mrs. Lulu Klein-egger is here from Grants Pass to care for Miss Gentry.

Mrs. LaVerne Van Marter, Jr., left Thursday for Portland where she will attend the Oregon florists' school of design which is being held in the city next week.
