

From The County Agent's Office

BY N. C. ANDERSON
Morrow county sheepmen who have not yet received a catalog for the Pendleton Ram Sale to be held on August 17, will be interested to hear that they are available now at the County Agent's office.
This sale, this year is offering 375 selected rams of seven different breeds and being held in the Round-up livestock sales pavilion starting at 10:00 a.m.
Breeds represented include Rambouillets, Lincoln-Rambouillet crossbreds, Columbias, Corriedales, Lincolns, Suffolks, and Hampshires. Most are yearling rams, however, there will be 10 stud rams sold in addition to the 10 ram lambs. More than one-half of the animals to be sold are Suffolks, and Willamette Valley breeders are making most of the consignments.
One purebred Suffolk breeder,

Glenn Cox, Philomath, is donating one ram. Proceeds from sale of this animal will be used toward entertaining guests attending the eighty-seventh annual convention of the National Wool Growers Association. The four-day convention will be held in Portland December 4 to 7.

Premium lists for the 1951 Morrow County Fair and Rodeo were mailed to all farm families this week. The fair committee, with the superintendents of each of the divisions spent considerable time this year in making revisions in the classes to accommodate all exhibitors. Look this premium list over, then plan for your exhibits. Remember, everyone has been considered in the classes which have been provided—it will please all if you bring in several exhibits.
If you have been overlooked in sending out the premium lists, we have a copy for you at this office.

Ranchers who are faced with the problem of reseeding range land can find sound advice in a newly published circular just released for distribution by the Oregon State College Agricultural Experiment Station.

The new publication "Cost Guides for Range Reseeding", is SCI 497 and was written by Dr. C. V. Plath, associate agricultural economist at O.S.C.

In sampling reseeding projects, costs in Gilliam and Grant counties varied from $4.00 to $15.00 per acre. With these variations found, a careful survey of the situation before beginning reseeding to determine what costs and methods are justified by the potential return.

A special section in the publication lists several check points for the rancher who wants an answer to the question, "Can I afford to reseed?"

Copies are available at this office.

The world's first known farmer's bulletin, containing instructions on everything from plowing and planting to scaring away birds and field mice, had just been discovered by archeologists in Iraq. These were said to be 3,700 years old. They were written in Sumerian script on a clay tablet.

Pendleton Site Of Annual Ram Sale August 17

Seven different breeds will be represented among the 375 selected rams offered at the twenty-fifth annual Oregon ram sale in Pendleton Friday, August 17, announces Victor W. Johnson, Umatilla county extension agent and secretary to the Oregon Wool Growers association, the sale sponsor.

The sale will be held in the Roundup livestock sales pavilion starting at 10 a.m.

Both stud and yearling rams will be included among the offerings made by 20 prominent breeders. Consignments are being made by two out-of-state breeders, Bennie Farms, Stanwood, Washington, and John K. Madsen Rambouillet farm, Mt. Pleasant, Utah.

The eastern Oregon livestock branch experiment station, Union will consign seven Columbias and three Hampshire yearling rams.

Breeds represented include Rambouillets, Lincoln-Rambouillet crossbreds, Columbias, Corriedales, Lincolns, Suffolks, and Hampshires.

One purebred Suffolk breeder, Glenn Cox, Philomath, is donating one ram. Proceeds from sale of this animal will be used toward entertaining guests attending the eighty-seventh annual convention of the National Wool Growers association. The four-day convention will be held in Portland December 4 to 7.

Although the bulk of the sale offerings are yearling rams, there will be 10 stud rams sold in addition to 10 ram lambs. More than one-half of the animals to be sold are Suffolks, and Willamette valley breeders are making most of the consignments.

Rams will be at the sale site not later than August 15 in order that they may be inspected by bidders. Stud rams will be sold singly. The remainder will go through the ring in pens of two to seven.

Judges Picked For State Fair Beef

Exhibitors of Beef cattle at the Oregon State Fair, starting on September 1 this year, will find their entries being judged by a seasoned hand at appraising the qualities of beef animals. This was revealed today when Dick Richards, assistant fair manager in charge of livestock exhibitions, announced the selection of E. J. "Ez" Fjeldstedt as judge for the Aberdeen-Angus, Hereford and Shorthorn breeds.

Well-known among cattlemen of the Northwest through his outstanding contributions as livestock specialist at Oregon State, "Ez" is a man well-qualified to pick the top beef animals, according to Mr. Richards.

Graduate of Utah State, specializing in animal husbandry, Mr. Fjeldstedt for many years now has the Ogden Livestock Show, one of the top shows of its kind. Perhaps the peak of his career was his managing of the great San Francisco World's Fair livestock competitions.

From wide experience in judging livestock throughout the nation, "Ez" today has the reputation of being able to spot a champion with unfailing accuracy. This reputation will be borne out again as he judges the Hereford, Shorthorn and Aberdeen-Angus beef entries at this year's great Oregon Fair.

In addition, he'll also do the judging of the showmanship classes in the 4-H beef competition.

Washington, also, Mrs. Addie Osborne, Mrs. Irene Osborne and son, Larry and Richard Leasy and Mrs. Harley Leasy, Bill Gienger and Mrs. Lavelle Porter and children.

Mr. and Mrs. Rho Bleakman and daughters and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bleakman visited Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Crum at the lookout on Monument Mountain Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dell Neal and Mr. and Mrs. Chance Wilson drove into the mountains to look for huckleberries last Sunday. They report the berries as being very scattered.

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Engle were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chance Wilson last Wednesday. They had some work done on their pickup while in town.

Mrs. Evelyn Sweek came home last Wednesday. Her sister Mrs. Stella Reynolds met her in Redmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Fleming returned Monday from a three week vacation at Deer Lick Springs in California.
