Local Help Asked

Mr. Anderson points out that these young people are neither hired hands nor guests. They will want to share in the work, yet should be free to attend 4-H and other community events and get acquainted with the people. The emphasis is definitely on community life and youth work. All come to the United States highly recommended and selected for their high moral character.

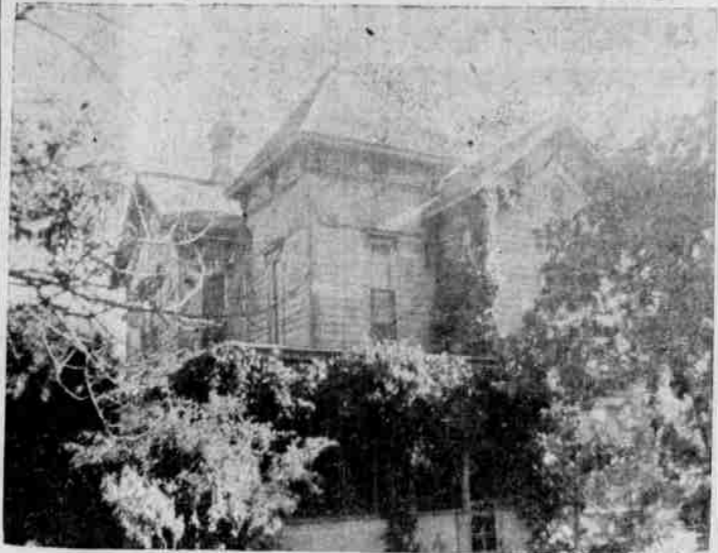

The IFYE delegates have no source of income while in this country, and dollar-short countries impose strict rules on how much money they may take out of their country. Many IFYEs arrive with as little as $25.00, which may be given the maximum allowed by law. Therefore, $20 or $30 a month is usually given them by their hosts in exchange for their work.

Mr. Anderson would like a family to volunteer as a host that has one or more children in 4-H Club work or of high school age. The family should accept the exchanger as it would want its own boy or girl accepted by a family abroad. The home should be sympathetic and understanding toward the difficulties met by a young person in a strange country. The hosts should help the IFYE attend the church of his choice. They should realize that the visitor is not only anxious to learn, but has much to give.

During the first three years of this program, 79 young men and women of 15 foreign countries visited this country, and 90 United States IFYE delegates lived with and learned about the customs and life of rural families in 14 foreign countries.

The agent asks any interested families to contact him at his office for more information about this program.

Old Willow Creek Landmark Disappears, Remodeling Started for Modern Home

Missing after over 64 years as a landmark of upper Willow Creek is the old home known in recent years as the Cleveland Place. The old house is nearly torn down by the present owner, Howard Cleveland, and will be remodeled into a modern home. The old photograph was found by Mrs. Frank Turner.

One of the oldest landmarks in the Heppner area is undergoing a complete change. The old home, located about three miles above the city on Willow creek and variously known as the Fuller place, the Hager place and the Cleveland place, and now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cleveland is being entirely remodeled into a modern residence.

The old house, built in 1887 by James Fuller, has had the top story removed and considerable reconditioning to the lower floor preparatory to receiving a thorough modernizing.

Construction of the old home was started by Fuller who died before the house was completed and never lived in it. His wife sold the house to J. M. Hager, father of J. O. Hager, and Mrs. A. D. McMurdo in 1889. Mrs. McMurdo and another younger sister were born there.

The house contained 10 rooms, including 5 bedrooms upstairs and one down, a living room, dining room, kitchen, pantry and an office. It had a full basement and two large verandas. Lumber for its construction was hauled in from The Dalles and all inside finish material was cedar. J. O. Hager told the Gazette Times that one of the best painters in this area finished the inside of the house even to painting wood grain and knots on the cedar doors.

The property on which the house stands was originally part of one of the first homesteads in this area taken up by two men by the names of Howard and French. In about 1917 the property was divided, the lower going to Frank Wilkinson, and the house and upper property being sold to Wendell H. Cleveland. The present owner, Howard Cleveland is a grandson of the former owner. The property has some of the oldest recorded water rights on Willow creek.

Although the house is 64 years old much of it was in good condition, though some repairs were required to the foundation before new work could start.

Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Crawford will spend this week-end in Richland, Washington visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley D. Fancher are the parents of a baby girl born Tuesday at a Portland hospital. She has been named Janet. Mrs. Fancher will return to Heppner about September 25.

Word has been received that W. Pruitt Cox, former Heppner resident, died at his home near Oregon City last Saturday. Funeral services were held Wednesday.

Mrs. LaVerne Van Marter returned Tuesday morning from Portland where she spent the weekend with her aunt, Mrs. Oscar Borg.
