State Stockpiles Civil Defense Needs

A stockpile of 1,000,000 paper cups and containers has been placed in a Salem warehouse to serve Oregon in the event of air raid or other disaster, according to the state civil defense office.

The paper supplies become essential in emergency hospitals and feeding the homeless when water supplies are knocked out, making dishwashing impossible.

State Civil Defense Director Jack Hayes reported the stockpile in Salem is part of 25,000,000 paper utensils being placed in the nation's most critical target areas by the Paper Cup and Container Institute, Inc., as association of 17 manufacturers, at its own expense. A total of 2,500,000 are being placed in the Northwest, with other supplies in the vicinity of Spokane and Seattle. They will be used only for emergency purposes, and will also be available to the Red Cross for local disasters, Oregon's stockpile is within an hour's drive of Portland.

"Experience in the Vanport flood and in the recent Kansas-Missouri floods have made evident the need for paper supplies in time of emergency," Hayes said. "The fact that industrialists are spending hundred of thousands of dollars to provide such a stockpile makes it evident they look upon civil defense as a permanent part of our way of life. These men regard such stockpiles as an investment to guarantee peace. They know that unprotected nations are a far more inviting target than one ready to patch up its wounds and jump back into the fight."
