

Heppner To See Historical Display

Oregon today is the same beautiful country which beckoned the weary pioneers more than a hundred years ago.

To sell Oregon to the people of this state and to give them an opportunity to see and understand its rich heritage and even richer future is the purpose of the Oregon Historical Caravan.

The story of Oregon has been put on wheels. Rare, historical documents and objects are being taken around the state in two specially constructed steel buses. The exhibits have been loaned by many museums, libraries and private citizens in various parts of the country.

The caravan is sponsored as a public service by the United States National Bank in celebration of the bank's 60th anniversary. It will be displayed in Heppner, Tuesday, September 4 and in Arlington September 5.

It will be shown in Heppner at the corner of Main and Willow streets and will be open from 10

Hospital Story

Continued From Page One beginning needs of seven infants. There is an electrically heated, thermostatically controlled incubator should Mrs. X's physician feel the baby requires its services. Adjacent to the nursery is the formula room where careful attention is given to the child's feeding and directly across the hall, where the patient can at times hear her own child's crying are the "Mother's rooms."

Particular care is taken by Pioneer Memorial attendants to make immediate and proper identification of new born infants. They are immediately fingerprinted and the mother will receive the birth certificate before her discharge.

Another service offered by Pioneer Memorial is the photographing of the baby shortly after delivery if the parents desire it. Orders may be left with the clerk when checking in and the Picture Shop will provide the new mother with a picture of her child by the time she is ready for discharge.

Of the 114 births at Pioneer Memorial, all have been single with the exception of two sets of twins. The first set was born to Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Williams, Kinzua, the other to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Adams of Spray. One of the Adams babies was still-born.
