

Julie Rules Pendleton Round-Up

Pendleton, Oregon—Riding ability, personality, general charm—all these, and freckles too—are the reasons why Julie King was chosen to reign as queen of the Pendleton Round-Up, September 12, 13, 14, 15.

Queen Julie, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester King, ranchers, learned to ride as soon as she could straddle a horse. She also learned to cook for harvest crews; to sew (she makes her own skirts and blouses); to be a real help to her dad in running his grain elevator, and to help keep books, for Her Highness has a real flair for mathematics and business.

Graduated from Pendleton senior high school this year, she went directly from the classroom to the big Pendleton Grain Growers plant and took her place in the main central office. She has the important job of writing up wheat tickets and weight receipts for ranchers. She does much clerical work. Incidentally, she's at work right on the tick of eight, every morning, and puts in a full day. Then she dashes to the Round-Up grounds to ride in preparation for the great show. She will ride in all parades, accompanied by her princesses, Jean Lazinka, Thelma Harvey, Creagh Brennan and Kathleen Folsom, fine riders, every one.

Julie, of pioneer parentage, is five feet four; weighs 114 pounds, has chestnut hair and brown eyes. The Round-Up city now reads itself to receive thousands of visitors at the fortieth performance starring the top cowboys of the world. Special features will include the Westward Ho! parade, Friday morning, and the "Over the Hill" pageant, Saturday's show. This gives to spectators, seated in the grandstands, a view of arrival of settlers in wagon trains, and the onslaught of hostile Indians.

For evening hours, the Happy Canyon pageant, typical of the old west, will unfold its story, followed by dances and games.

Home Economics Program For Fair Completed

The Home Economics 4-H program at the County Fair at Heppner begins Wednesday, September 5, at 11 a.m. with all exhibits in. At 1:15 p.m. the first contest will be the cake baking contest sponsored by the Oregon Wheat Commission, according to Maud C. Casswell, County Home Demonstration Agent.

Rules for the contest for baking yellow sponge cake, no baking powders, using soft wheat flour milled in Oregon or in another Pacific Northwest state. Contestants may use any recipe and method they prefer. Girls who enter the contest must bring all the utensils and supplies they will need—flour will be furnished.

Girls entering the cake baking contest at the County Fair at Heppner are Jean Marie Graham and Marilyn Pettyjohn of Heppner.

September 5, Wednesday, at 2 p.m. Demonstration contests start. Demonstrations in food preparation, clothing, and knitting will be given by 4-H Club girls.

The contestant teams will be competing for the special Beekeepers Association award, the Wool Growers Auxiliary award, as well as placings.

Judging of 4-H Home Economics exhibits will start Thursday, September 6.

Judging contests for all girls in Home Economics will start at 10:30 a.m. Classes in clothing, cookery, knitting, child care will
