New Student Week Set Sept. 16-22 At Oregon State

New students will be orientated to college life during New Student Week, September 16 to 22, at Oregon State college, according to Dr. D. T. Ordeman, college registrar.

The first gathering of the freshman class and new transfer students will be in the OSC Coliseum Sunday night, September 16, at 7:30. The week's activities will be outlined at that time.

Highlighted throughout the orientation period will be general assemblies, group meetings, individual conferences and formal registration, Dr. Ordeman said.

Important aptitude, English and mathematics placement tests will be given Monday, September 17. These tests will enable college officials to place students in proper sections so they may benefit more fully from their education at Oregon State, he emphasized.

Deans will speak at the school meetings, Tuesday evening, September 18, where students will be assigned advisors who will guide them in registering for courses each term.

Official registration for courses will begin Tuesday with seniors signing up first so as to fill in their schedules with courses needed for graduation.

The three other classes — freshman, sophomore and junior — will register all day Friday and Saturday morning, September 21 and 22. Classes will start September 24.

Magazine Publicizes Morrow Citizens

The citizens planning committees of Morrow County are cited in the September issue of Country Gentleman as outstanding examples of how Oregonians are charting a course for farming and farm life instead of leaving the job in Government hands.

F. L. Ballard, Associate Director of Federal Cooperative Extension for Oregon, writing under the title, "Where Farmers Do the Planning Themselves," says that accomplishments of the Morrow committees include the building of a hospital and the changing of the wheat variety commonly planted in the county. Since 1948, the wheat-variety pattern has been changed to include 45,000 acres of Elgin, a high-yielding wheat, which formerly was planted on only a few hundred acres.

HANDIEST HIRED MAN A FARMER EVER HAD!

Ever since 1910, Pacific Power & Light has been extending Reddy Kilowatt's service farther and farther along country roads, bringing comfort-giving, labor-saving electricity to more and more farms.

This progressive program has resulted in the electrification of nearly 100% of farms in PP&L's service area.

Working as a team with practical and ingenious farmers, PP&L specialists have helped put into practice many new uses for electric power—to reduce farm labor, increase farm profits.

Because of work like this by pioneering companies, and the national program of the REA, electrified farming across the nation has made tremendous strides toward the goal we all desire—electricity on every farm in America!

PACIFIC POWER & LIGHT COMPANY
Farm Electrification Week—August 26-September 1

First electrified farm home in the PP&L area was connected in 1906. Today's farm home enjoys the same electric comforts as its city cousin.

Pressure water systems on the farm have replaced the handpump and windmill, thanks to dependable Reddy Kilowatt.

Electric pump irrigation helps produce bigger, better crops throughout the Pacific Northwest.

Farm upkeep is made easier, more economical by electric power tools in the farm workshop.

On poultry farms, Reddy Kilowatt runs incubators, brooders and lights—to produce greater farm profits.

The milking machine is a real labor-saver. Steam boilers, milk coolers are among other electric helpers in the dairy.

Portable electric motors, used on conveyors, feed-grinders, silage-cutters, etc., speed and ease many farm jobs.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE FIGURES SHOW THAT 95% OF ALL FARMS IN OREGON AND WASHINGTON NOW HAVE ELECTRIC SERVICE.
