Don't Forget — It's School Time

With the start of school next Monday there are a couple of Oregon laws that go back into effect after a summer lay off and it seems wise to remind drivers of their purpose. During the summer vacation, traffic laws regarding speeds on streets bordering school grounds and school cross walks, and the law calling for motorists to stop when they approach or overtake a school bus loading or unloading children are inoperative, but starting Monday police will be on the lookout for violators.

The law says cars must travel no faster than 20 miles an hour while passing school grounds or school cross walks during school hours. The school bus law requires a driver to come to a full stop when he sees a school bus stopped along the road loading or unloading. This rule applies to all cars and trucks, regardless of the direction of travel.

These laws are designed to protect our children—not just as a nuisance for drivers. Maybe a driver can save a few seconds or a minute by "sneaking by" when nobody is looking but one of those "sneaks" could cost the life of your own or your neighbor's boy or girl. Let's give the kids a break and let them live.

One more thought — the same laws apply to the young drivers too. It might be your classmate, you know!

Portland-Salem Capitol

When the present new Capitol was completed in 1938 there was a report — never convincingly denied — that the plans were turned around so the front intended to face south was built to face north. Some wag suggested the change of front had been engineered by Portland politicians so it would be headed for that city when they got casters under it to move the Capitol north.

This week the legality of maintaining the headquarters of the state liquor control commission in Portland was challenged. The Knox law creating the commission still carries plain directive: "The principal office of the commission shall be in the city of Salem."

This provision has never been complied with. Governor Douglas McKay says he is going to do something about it.

The highway commission last week decided not to hold their regular meetings in their new $2,000,000 building in the capital city.

State departments, boards and commissions having their headquarters — not branch offices — in Portland are:

The state highway department, liquor control commission, game commission, fish commission, state board of health, state board of accountancy, architects' examiners, state board of barber examiners, chiroprodists' examining board, cosmetic therapy examiners, state board of eugenics, funeral directors and embalmers, geology and mineral industries department, state board of medical examiners, milk marketing administration, naturopathic board of examiners, state board of pharmacy, state racing commission, state retirement board, state sanitary authority and the public welfare commission.

New Prison Warden

A California man was appointed warden of the penitentiary last week by the state board of control. The new warden, Virgil J. O'Malley, 48, has been in prison work for 15 years, will replace George Alexander, who becomes superintendent in charge of the institution at a salary of $8,000. O'Malley will receive $7,900 a year.

Members of the board are hoping the appointment will end trouble at the prison, where a recent sitdown strike emphasized the need of a separate head over the inmates of the crowded institution.

O'Malley, a native of Iowa, has studied criminology in courses at New York university and the City College of New York. Before coming to Oregon he was associate warden of the California state prison at Soledad.

Gubernatorial Appointments

Mrs. Roe Cloud, West Lynn, was appointed this week by Governor McKay to serve on the Oregon Indian Affairs Council. Mrs. Roe Cloud was American mother of 1950. The council will meet at the Capitol September 11 to discuss transfer of several Oregon tribes from federal to state control.

Other appointments made this week by the governor were:

Ernest M. Justus, Portland, as a member of the Oregon state fair commission; Ralph Crum, Ione, and E. M. Nelson, The Dalles, to advisory memberships on the legislative interim committee on weather control; Dudley Sitton, Ontario, county representative on the potato board, and A. R. Wetzel, Portland, Dean Walker and Dr. Charles D. Byrne to the new western interstate commission on higher education.

Legal Opinions

City or state employees using their private cars on official business are not exempt from the state financial responsibility act should an accident occur, Attorney General George Neuner ruled this week. His decision was in response to a question from William Healey. With this exception, his mind was pretty much on fish, studying how to get compensation for the game commission for an estimated 2,000 salmon that died after ammonia was released into the Santiam river near the Detroit dam, and backing up the commission in banning fishing for sturgeon in the Willamette river.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

September 8, 1921 —

E. M. Hulden was a passenger for Portland on Sunday, taking with him his two young sons who will enter school there.

C. E. and Leonard Carlson were in the city Tuesday and report that they have finished with the harvesting of their crop and now the big job is to get it to market. The roads into Ione from their place are badly cut up just now and will be in an almost impassible condition until rains come. They report a very satisfactory yield of good grain this season.

State Highway Commissioner W. B. Barratt and family have returned from their summers vacation, spent at Portland and the seashore. They drove in from Portland over the highway.

Miss Vera Mahoney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Mahoney, arrived home from Seattle on Sunday. Miss Mahoney is a graduate of the U. of Washington and remained in Seattle for the summer taking special work at the University key, Mrs. Dorris Duffy, The Dalles, and several grandchildren. (Continued on Page 7)
