New Practices Add To State PMA Program

A "continuing" feature has been added to the state agricultural conservation program, announces E. Harvey Miller, state production and marketing administration committee chairman.

Provisions were added late last year making it possible for the county PMA committees to start their program year in October for certain practices. Heretofore, the program has been carried out on a calendar year basis. By receiving prior approval, farmers may now start permanent type practices in the fall and carry them through to conclusion without danger of losing assistance.

Formerly, Miller explains, fall practices suffered. County allocations of funds were frequently exhausted early in the year making it impossible for county committees to offer assistance on practices normally started during fall months. The fact that county ACP books had to be closed at year end made the carry-over feature impossible whether funds were spent or not.

By strengthening the program in this way, farmers with prior approval from their local PMA committee will be able to start such permanent farm improvements as tile installations. When specifications are met, assistance will be guaranteed by the county committee from ear-marked funds.

In western Oregon, the new feature is expected to encourage practices where earth moving is required. It is during the fall period when heavy equipment, normally used in the woods or in other construction work is available to farmers on a short-time basis. Drainage improvements will be materially stepped up, Miller believes.

Two practices in eastern Oregon counties normally carried out during the late fall after irrigation has been completed and land leveling and irrigation system reorganization. Both are expected to receive new attention due to the program administrative change.
